Warns Of Solicitor

To the Editor:
Dear Sir:—
Enclosed please find a letter which I thought you might be interested in.

I had a young man call on me a short time ago requesting a neighbor who was visiting me and myself to sign a petition for a personal income tax instead of a property tax. We both signed as he had the names of several people we knew and afterwards he said he would like each of us to give a dollar to help finance the drive. We asked who was backing him and he said, "Successful Farming." I then asked where I would send the money as I didn't have it right then and he gave me his name and address in Royal Oak. He said not to send it to the magazine office but to him direct. I wrote the magazine office and am enclosing the letter they sent me. I was informed by a friend that another solicitor was at her home in Farmington and he only requested twenty-five cents. I thought you might be interested and would let the residents of Farmington know about these men.

Thanking you,
Mrs. Eugene Cruse,
Aberdeen Road,
Farmington, Mich.

(Editor's Note: The letter from Successful Farming, enclosed by Mrs. Cruse, states that the magazine does not have solicitors requesting for the magazine, "or anything else," the only soliciting done being for subscriptions. The name of the unauthorized solicitor for donations is given as "McInney.")

Corn's Many Products
Not much more than half of the great corn crop of the country finds its way to the dining table. The remainder goes to the refinery to be made up into a large variety of materials. These include the "sparklers" which do fourth of July duty, explosives, face cream, soap, artificial rubber and silk, varnish, tanning extracts, radio batteries, textiles, paper carpet, maulage, salad dressing, sirup, cooking oil, vinegar and milk acids. Some considerable success has attended the manufacture of paper from the stalks, and it is probable that at no distant day a profitable use will be found for the piles of corn stalks which accumulate each year on the farms of this country.

Famous Dinosaur Skeleton
The dinosaur on exhibition at Peabody museum of Yale university is nearly 70 feet long, 16 feet high, and the skeleton weighs six and a half tons. Its estimated weight when alive was between 37 and 40 tons. The specimen was discovered by William Beebe in Wyoming in 1881, and the bones were brought to Yale under the direction of Prof. Othniel C. Marsh, whose research resulted in this type's being known as Brontosaurus erectus. At Yale's bicentennial in 1901 a portion of the skeleton was mounted and exhibited. Lack of space prevented the erection of the rest, which remained in storage. A few years ago the mounting was begun anew, the hull of Peabody being especially constructed to house this one animal.

Old-Hand-Woven Linen
of Marvelous Fineness

Twelve dozen of everything—that was the quantity with the former continental bride of a century ago received in her trousseau. It sounds lavish, but it was actually common sense, because our great-grandparents had a grand hampering only once every three months!

A relic of those brave days appears on special occasions now, in a smart New York home. The linen damask cloth was woven by hand in the days when George Washington was more than a memory, and hand woven so finely that linen experts of today marvel at it. Narrow looms compelled the weavers to make their cloth in two strips, which are sewn together down the middle of the table.

An interesting feature of this setting is that the ancient damask creates a background of harmony for the latest silver, whose design identically matches the china.

Coffee in 1634

As to the precise date when coffee was introduced into England, authorities differ, and very little of real value on the subject can be found, wrote Edward H. Emerson in "Beverages, Past and Present." Sir Henry Blount visited Turkey in 1634 and in one of his letters says: "The Turks have a drink called 'cauphe,' made of a berry as big as a small bean, dried in a furnace and beat to a powder of a sooty colour, in taste a little bitterish, that they see the and drink, hot as may be endured. It is good at all hours of the day, but especially at morning and evening, when to that purpose they entertain themselves two or three hours in 'cauphe-houses,' which, in Turkey, abound more than inns and alehouses with us."

WARNING ISSUED REGARDING FAKE CHRISTMAS SEALS

Informed that seals closely imitating tuberculosis Christmas seals are being sold throughout Michigan, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association advises local residents who wish to contribute to tuberculosis work not to confuse other seals with the 1931 tuberculosis Christmas seal which carries a double-barred red cross, as always, and an old-time English coaching scene in its design. "The official tuberculosis Christmas seal will not appear until Thanksgiving day," the Association's statement continues. "Those seeking to contribute toward tuberculosis work will do well to examine closely the seals they buy. The tuberculosis Christmas seal carries the double-barred red cross, symbol of the anti-tuberculosis campaign throughout the nation."
