

A "HOT DOGS for Peace" sale on the Orchard Ridge campus of Oakland Community College drew a number of hungry students this week. Glen Oppenheimer (right), Bloomfield Hills freshman, and Karen Longbrake (left), Southfield freshman, were among the students to take turns selling a hot dog, potato chips and pop for 35 cents. The sale was two reasons. Besides raising funds for the SMC (an anti-war group), it provided competition for the "high-priced" cafeteria (students claimed to make 12 cents profit on each sale). "If you can kill two birds with one stone, I say you had better throw," one student said. (Observer photo by Kathy Moran)

Today's Vet: A New Breed

Daniels Den

By EMORY DANIELS

This coming Monday, Oct. 25, we will be observing Veterans Day under the new Monday - holiday calendar. It will be a "new" Veterans Day, not only because it's in October but because the recent veterans are a new breed of cat.

Being a veteran for many is not what it used to be. It is not really that the Vietnam returnee is ashamed of being a veteran but the alumni title no longer is bantled about as a distinction of loyalty others do not possess.

AFTER THE William Calley trial, many veterans made public statements about atrocities they committed or were involved with.

What was so interesting was not so much the acts committed but the young men's thoughts in retrospect about military training, combat situations and what Vietnam is all about.

Some of these men left high school, joined the Army, volunteered for special forces with ideas of performing John Wayne feats to save the nation. The brainwashing in basic was effective for some time but began to diminish quickly during a 12 month tour in Vietnam.

Granted, a young man who stones an infant to death is going to have a strong reaction to the war after returning to civilian life. After cooling off, these memories will speak louder than the "save the country" rhetoric.

A NUMBER of seasoned veterans returning to civilian life from Vietnam talk very much like young men who have chosen to take up a life in Canada to avoid the draft.

An unusual development in the past three years has been that returning veterans are now organizing into anti-war groups to pressure for a quick end to the war. These are not men defending their actions or seeking their own pardon by joining veterans for peace groups.

And veterans, like the country, are asking why? Why Vietnam? Less impressive are the old answers: to defend the nation; to keep communism from engulfing Southeast Asia, then the Philippines, Australia, etc.; to save democracy for a freedom-loving people (the South Vietnamese, in case you didn't know).

Public opinion is now beginning to reject as propaganda the "Why Vietnam?" expressions and it took a recession, not a tour of combat duty, to sway the nation to an anti-war posture.

The combat veteran now has the memories as well as the recession awaiting his return. And it's "the return" which is changing veterans and bringing a new dimension to Veterans' Day.

THE VETERAN returns to unemployment, rising costs and a housing market which leaves him out.

If a suburbanite, he cannot return to his hometown to buy a home and raise a family but will seek areas where low-cost housing is available.

While he was away fighting to preserve democracy, the suburbs have continued fighting to preserve white neighborhoods. Instead of machine-guns, the weapons are zoning ordinances and building codes.

To keep blacks out, quality homes must be built on large lots. Low-cost subdivisions, after all, will place a burden on the school system.

So the returning veteran from Farmington can either continue living with mom and dad or try and pay the high rents for apartments. If a wife and children are his goal, the veteran can move outside of Farmington. The rural atmosphere has no place for the veteran.

men in service

Army Pvt. Howard Turner, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Turner of 35653 Valley Creek, Farmington, has completed a 17-week strategic microwave systems operation and maintenance course at the U.S. Army Signal Center and School, Ft. Monmouth, N.J.

Army Cadet Terry O. Lang, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Lang Jr. of 2705 Old Colony Rd., Farmington, has completed six weeks practical work in military leadership at the Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps advanced summer camp at Ft. Lewis, Wash.

Lang, who received his BS degree in 1970 from University of Colorado, was one of 13,000 students attending ROTC summer training at six installations in the U.S.

Advice Given On Halloween

FARMINGTON Township Police are planning special security measures for Halloween weekend and are urging cooperation from parents and residents.

Ronald Holko, director of public safety, strongly advocates that all parents accompany their children on the trick-or-treat rounds.

He advises that children make the rounds on Sunday evening, the calendar date of Halloween, because traffic volume will be less than Saturday night.

Auxiliary police members will be on patrol Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday in an effort to reduce vandalism and secure safety for children while they are going from house to house.

Holko reminds parents that the township curfew is 10 p.m. for children up to age 16 and midnight for 16 and 17-year-olds.

The township has a parental responsibility ordinance, which makes parents responsible for curfew violations and vandalism committed by their children.

Optimists Organize, Elect Teeples Leader

FARMINGTON The Farmington Area Optimist Club has organized and elected Earl Teeples as its first president.

The new club, with the theme "Friend of the Boy," also elected: Carl Westerberg, first vice-president; Jack Cotton, second vice president; Glenn Strelt, secretary; and Gary Cook treasurer.

Chosen as directors were Jim Reese, Jack Coffin, Norman Stainbrook, John Muller, George Trout and John Hershey.

The club will soon become part of Optimist International with clubs throughout North America.

Optimist clubs traditionally seek to do those things which almost everybody agrees need doing, says Teeples, unhampered by religion, partisan politics or legislative pressures.

"Almost no problem or challenge is too great to daunt the many Optimist clubs which annually exorcise the many community service projects to the benefit of the needy, unfortunate, youth and the entire community.

"The aggregate result of their expression of interest and action in humanity's problems is staggering, almost beyond belief - a record of contribution to the public welfare unsurpassed by any other type of organization."

The Farmington Area Optimists club is made up of business and professional men. Membership is still open and those interested are invited to attend one of the club's Thursday morning meetings at 7:30 in the Botsford Inn on Grand River in Farmington.

Luscombe Is Now Tumbling

FARMINGTON Harold Luscombe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merton Luscombe of 3300 Freedom Road, Farmington has been selected as a member of the Fred - Hardeman College tumbling team.

A 1969 graduate of Southfield High School, Luscombe is majoring in Bible studies at the Henderson, Tenn. college.

BEING A VETERAN is sorta like being a senior citizen or a black.

Society has a special place for him to live and many doors are closed because of prejudice. "Our hometown is yours," the veteran tells his dad.

The veteran can now join James Meredith in saying "If America isn't for everybody, it just isn't America." The new breed of cat needs a lobbyist because "the return" finds him near the same economic level as many of the blacks his hometown is building walls to keep out.

Veteran's Day is observed to honor the dead who have fallen in battle. They deserve and we owe them a few moments of our time. In spite of Vietnam, we must remember our dead soldiers.

We ought, too, to reflect on those combat veterans who have fortunately escaped the bombs. The boys are coming home. Or are they?
