A young man's motive

for saving, we feel, should not be fear of the future—of dependency or poverty in old age—but hope for the future. His aim should be to prepare himself for opportunity, by setting aside a portion of his income, regularly, as a fund of "working capital" that will help him realize the glowing future he visions.

But whether or not you are a young man, isn't that motive enough for coming in and opening your Savings Account NOW!

SEVENTEEN TO BE AWARDED LETTERS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Coach Burns Sees Good Prospects In Material Returning Next Year

With another football season closed Coach E. Burns is already looking forward to another year when his chances for a winning team look good. Although winning only one game this season, the record of the Farmington High School team can not be termed a total failure. Only one game was lost by Farmington to a team of its own class, the other opponents all being rated in a class above the Blue and White.

The one team in its class that defeated Farmington was Northville and then it was only in the last 30 seconds of the game that Northville was able to win by one point, converting the extra point after touchdown. Farmington held Wayne, a team in a higher class, to a one-touchdown victory.

The Blue and White scored its lone victory over Belleville and lost to Dearborn, Rochester, Northville, Wayne, Plymouth and Lincoln Park.

Letters are to be awarded 17 graders, probably sometime after Christmas, according to Coach Burns. Of this number 10 will return for at least another season.

Those who have played their last game are F. Brooks, W. Cairns, H. Chamberlain, R. Fendt, G. Sweet and R. Reynolds.

Returning next year will be E. Candell, H. Davis, K. Graham, W. Hamilton, W. Kaufmann, G. Lancaster, H. Spaller, G. Wagner Harold Westfall and Howard Westfall.

Commerce Hunters See Bear In North Country

Many deer and more deer stories have been brought back from the north, but not many hunters could claim to have seen bear on their trips. A party consisting of Supervisor Joseph A. Long of Commerce Township, Township Clerk Lee Welch, Justice Erle Welch, Bert and Floyd Roselle, Albert and Arthur Richardson and Lloyd Coe and Bert Bowers saw some bear in the beautiful Taguamenon River country in which they hunted.

Mr. Long brought back a fine eight-point buck, others who brought home deer being Bert and Floyd Roselle.

Of Latin Derivation

The word "pauvre" meaning a person destitute of worldly goods, does not occur anywhere in the Bible. It is of Latin origin and derived from the same root as "poor."

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Riddle of the Casket Letters

ONE of the most tragic and pitiable figures of history, Mary Stuart, dowager queen of the French and reigning queen of Scotland, is surrounded by much that is strange and mysterious—particularly in the events which marked the closing days of her career, for it is here that historians come up against the blank wall of the problem of the "casket letters," one of the unsolved riddles of the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Mary Stuart was only nineteen when, heading the pleas of her people, she sailed from France and returned to Scotland after the death of her French husband. Hardly had she landed, before her insistence upon adhering to Catholicism brought her into conflict with many of her own subjects, while the controversy with Queen Elizabeth over the succession to the British throne added additional fuel to the flames of dissension on both sides of the English Channel.

But the principal troubles of the young queen were due to the efforts of her uncle to secure for her a second husband, Lord Darnley, son of the Earl of Lennox, whose family selected for this honor. It did not take the queen long to discover Darnley's true character and marital discord of the most intense nature ensued, culminating in the suspicion that Mary had become embroiled in an intrigue with David Rizzio, her secretary, and the assassination of the latter under the very eyes of the queen.

The death of Darnley followed shortly afterwards, under circumstances which pointed toward the complicity of the Earl of Bothwell, a close friend of the queen, who, after being tried and acquitted of the charge of murder, carried Mary off to his castle at Dunbar, where he married her a few days after securing a divorce from his former wife. The storm of indignation to which this action gave rise was so widespread and so intense that it became necessary for Mary to flee from Scotland and take refuge in England, where she sought the protection of Elizabeth, her cousin.

The "Good Queen Bess," however, had by no means forgotten the efforts which Mary had previously made to secure her own throne and, therefore, ordered an investigation of the charges made by the Earl of Murray that Mary had been involved in the conspiracy to murder her second husband, Lord Darnley. Here it is that the casket letters make their appearance, for Murray introduced as direct evidence of his accusation a silver casket which Mary had given to her first husband, the king of France, and had later presented to Bothwell, containing in the latter instance, a number of love letters and sonnets and two documents, one of which was supposed to have been in her own handwriting and the other to have been dictated by her.

If the genuineness of these letters is not questioned, they form incontrovertible proof of the queen's guilt in conspiring against the life of her husband, as well as in acquiescing in the plot by which Bothwell, as to carry her off to his mountain fortress. But the queen of Scots paid so little attention to this evidence, which she declared was nothing more than a barefaced forgery, that she instructed her counselors to ignore it completely and to build her defense on other grounds. The adherents to the King of Murray, illegitimate son of King James, and therefore half-brother to Mary, maintained, on the other hand, that the intimacy of certain passages in the letters and the great amount of detail which they contained was sufficient proof of their authenticity, despite the fact that they were couched in terms so vulgar and in language so unbecoming that it seemed impossible that the queen could have written them.

The combination of the casket letters, the constant stream of underground intrigue and the hatred of Elizabeth culminated in the sentencing of Mary to the scaffold—but the casket letters vanished as mysteriously as they had appeared and the question of whether or not they were genuine has to be listed among the mysteries which surrounded the reign of the ill-fated queen of the Scots.

Germana Lay Fancy Walks

Welded sheet-steel frames or stencils are being used in Germany in laying garden and park or other walks in patterned colored concrete. The frames, or forms, are ten by fifteen feet in size, with upright sides and interior divisions making a pattern of any design and for any number of colors. The form is set on the usual foundation and the colored concrete poured into the proper spaces until the whole form is filled, when it is moved ahead. Two men can handle the frame and can lay 200 square yards a day.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Football Dance Planned By Northwestern Club

The Northwestern Athletic Club will sponsor its annual football dance at the Oddfellows' Hall, Grand River at Eight Mile road, next Thursday evening, December 3. Music will be provided by the Detroit Merry-makers.

The football dance is one of the largest social events of the season and all members of the club and their friends are looking forward to this year's affair with great interest.

There will be favors, confetti and noise makers, according to the committee in charge.

Farmington Gains Round Trip Rates On Busses

Round trip rates with a 15 per cent reduction in bus fares became effective in Farmington this week on all Blue Goose Lines.

Several weeks ago when a general reduction in prices was announced and special round trip rates made available at all places where there were established bus stations, Farmington was not included. An investigation by the Enterprise disclosed that round trip rates could not be obtained here until a regular bus station was established. Several available locations were suggested to officials of the company with the result that last week an agreement was reached between the Blue Goose Lines and the proprietors of the Sugar Bowl whereby that place would be used as a bus station and tickets sold there.

One Idea of Music

Music was not always regarded as highly as it is today, as witness the advice of Lord Chesterfield in his famous "Letters to His Son," wherein he states: "Do not trouble to learn the fiddle, when, by paying money you can procure someone else to play it for you."

World-Famous Hoax

The "Cardiff Giant," a famous hoax, was a gypsum statue unearthed at Cardiff, near Lafayette, N. Y., in October, 1850. For some time antiquarians and paleontologists believed it to be either a work of ancient sculpture or a fossilized man. It was exhibited in many cities in the United States, but eventually was "discovered" to be a fraud. The statue had been cut from a quarry in Iowa, wrought in Chicago and buried in Cardiff.
