NOSEY NORA

By DOROTHY HUGLAS
(Copyright by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)
(W. N. U. Service)

NORA had always been what the family vaguely called "nosey." She always wondered what the people at tables round about her were eating and what shoppers had in their numerous bundles. She even surmised at sight of truth and subtleness just what their contents might be.

Nora didn't mind being tiddled about her curiosity.

"It's a perfectly harmless amusement," she always said. "And I get leaps of fun out of it."

"You should be a detective instead of an editor," some of her friends told her.

So in order to be nearer her editorial chair Nora took a small apartment in an old house down town.

There were two rooms on the second floor with a large dressing room connecting them and Nora had suddenly decided on them when she felt to wondering if there was anything in the cupboards that lined the wall above the ample wardrobe. They were so high that the figures she would have to climb on a table top if she were to make use of them. Soon after she had settled in her new quarters she climbed up on her small kitchen table to roll open the old mahogany door.

"Humph!" she commented, "there's not much here. The former tenant took everything along—the place to put away winter curtains and coats and hats. What I believe I've discovered something." She strained on tiptoe and dislodged a panel of wood that had made the cupboard a few inches more shallow than its neighbor. Nora was excited. She dislodged the panel and exclaimed with surprise.

"The little compartment so carefully concealed was filled with papers and a diary. Nora sat down on the edge of the table, her feet swinging, animatedly, her eyes swiftly scanning the pages of the diary.

"Well, of all things!" she exploded, "this is some poor struggling writer's farewell to a career and oh—how broken hearted he is." She reread portions, "With the sealing up of this panel I am hiding away all that makes life wonderful in my soul and all the best of me is here—the rest is going into a world of business and a hunt for the filthy lucre that enables one to live and—marry. I am doing it for Amy—I regret she could not give me a longer trial at writing. I know I should have won out. However, there seems to be penalties attached to loving so good-by—fair dreams. A tear splashed down on the diary and Nora dashed her nose with her handkerchief. She jumped up swiftly and hauled down a lot of the manuscripts packed in the cupboard.

For a long time Nora reread the stories. When she had finished about a dozen she went down to the house-keeper and made inquiry as to the previous tenants in her room. She got much information. Sufficient anyway to make her fling herself into her coat and hat and take the subway up to Seventy-second street.

It was about seven in the evening as she made her way to a most respectable boarding house and asked if Mr. Tom Webber still lived there.

"Is he in at present?" asked Nora, and being told to have a seat in the reception room she waited.

She glanced up when a sort of miserable looking young man came questioning toward her. She told him straight off that she wished to talk with him about some stories and diary that she had found in her studio.

The light that swept suddenly over Webber's face brought a swift lump to Nora's throat. He was transformed from his misery into radiant life and interest. He sat down close beside Nora.

"Mr. Webber," said Nora severely, "you are a very wicked and very weak young man."

Webber had not expected anything like this and he looked his surprise.

"Worse!" continued Nora. "You have deliberately tried to strangle a brain child—to cast it off for the sake of some woman. You should be thoroughly ashamed of yourself—to have knuckled down to a paltry money-making position when you have a wonderful gift."

Webber gasped, then laughed the first hearty laugh he had felt since leaving his old studio. "There must be lots to tell me," he said swiftly and eagerly, "won't you come out to some quiet place with me for dinner? I'm so fed up with this conventional boarding house with its three square meals a day that I feel I will bust—if I don't get out."

Nora laughed in complete sympathy and wondered how a fine manly man like Tom Webber had ever let himself be stepped on by some female. "Love," she thought, "is a funny thing."

"A good idea," Nora said, "so get your hat. I can hardly wait to tell you how good your stories are."

Webber snatched both her hands in his and gave them a squeeze that hurt before finishing upstairs three at a time for his hat.

"You will be a very large, red feather in my editorial cap," she told him later. "I am annoyed that you never tried my magazine—with any of your tales."

"I didn't dare aspire so high—I thought you only took good names," he said modestly.

"Only good stories," said Nora, and when she saw the look in Webber's eyes, that was all for her, she knew that for once her nosiness had led her into real romance.

Passages in Bible Foretelling Modern Achievements Pointed Out By Pastor

Choosing as his topic, "Modern Science In An Ancient Book," Rev. Elmer W. Palmer, pastor of Farmington Baptist church, addressed Farmington Exchange Club Wednesday. Taking his material from the Book of Job, Rev. Palmer pointed out 40 questions, few of which have been solved by modern science.

Rev. Palmer turned to other parts of the Bible where some of the accomplishments of modern science were foretold which include the automobile, flying machines, law of evaporation, the paring of light, and the chemical value of snow for soils.

The passage prophesying the automobile was quoted by Rev. Palmer from the second chapter of Nahum, the fourth verse: "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against the other, in the broad ways. They shall seem like torches, they shall run like lightning."

Quoting from Isaiah, the sixteenth chapter, eighth verse, Rev. Palmer gave a passage foretelling the airplane. It says: "Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?"

Rev. Palmer touched briefly upon many other questions in the Bible concerning modern science. He urged his listeners to turn to the Bible and read it, saying that it is yet far ahead of the discoveries of modern science.

STUDENTS TO BE TRANSPORTED TO SUNDAY SCHOOL

Baptist Sunday School Officials Will Begin New Policy Sunday Morning

The Baptist Bible School will bring the boys and girls who live at a distance to the school each Sunday. This new venture will start this coming Sunday when ten cars will make the "Baptist Bible School" will leave the building at 11:20 and go to the homes assigned each driver and bring the children. After the school, the boys and girls will be taken to their homes.

A check of the subdivisions around the city has shown that more than 50 youngsters are not now attending any church and would attend if they were able. Workers from the church are calling in these homes this week, inviting the children and explaining the plan to the parents.

The pastor, Rev. E. W. Palmer, will be glad to have a phone call from any parent who would like their children to take advantage of this new arrangement.

The equipment for Religious educational work at this church is complete. There are five separate departments meeting at one time and for the class periods there are 15 classes, mostly which meet in separate rooms for the study of the lesson.

This week the church will observe the second anniversary of the dedication of the new unit and the hope of all the workers is that a new attendance record might be set. All who are not attending any church are invited to come and visit next Sunday.
