PROPRIETOR

Cornelius Vanderbilt

BUILDER OF RAILROADS

In the 1860's a dozen little railroads stretched end to end across New York state. Squabbling, indifferent management and poor methods had caused both owners and public to lose faith in them. But Cornelius Vanderbilt knew that the nation's future and the railroads were interdependent . . . AND HE HAD FAITH IN THE NATION'S FUTURE. Buying each line, he forged them all into a great trunk system and made a fortune.

The cornerstone of great fortunes are always laid in lean years . . . by foresight that sees beyond local pessimism. The next decade will see new names in place of old. They will be the names of those who refused to listen when people said "it can't be done."
