WINNING OUT

It's doing your job the best you can, And being just to your fellow man, It's making money, but holding friends, And staying true to your aims and ends, It's figuring how and learning why, And looking forward and thinking high, And dreaming a little and doing much, It's keeping always in closest touch, With what is finest in word and deed, It's being thorough, yet making speed, It's daring blithely the field of chance, While making labor a brave romance, It's going onward despite defeat And fighting staunchly, but keeping clean, It's being clear and it's playing fair, It's laughing lightly at Dame Despair, It's looking up at the stars above, And drinking deeply of life and love, It's struggling on with true will to win, But taking loss with a cheerful grin, It's sharing sorrow, and work, and mirth, And making better this good old earth, It's striving, striving through strain and stress, It's doing your noblest—that's Success!

New Metal Responds to Earth's Magnetism

The remarkable properties of permalloy, a super-magnetic metal developed during the course of telephone research in the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York, are demonstrated in this picture by Benjamin P. Grace, assistant vice president. He is holding a rod of permalloy in a north-south direction, along the lines of the earth's magnetic field. In this position the rod becomes a magnet, strong enough to support a piece of sheet metal. As he turns the rod to east and west, across the earth's magnetic field, it ceases to be a magnet, and the piece of metal which it holds falls to the ground. This material is very responsive to the influence of small magnetic forces, of which the earth's magnetic field is an example.

FOUR BELL COMPANIES TO SPEND $16,000,000 IN 1932

Expenditure of over $16,000,000 is planned during 1932 for expanding Bell System plant serving the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia, by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies. This is an increase of about $2,500,000 over the expenditures in 1931 for construction projects.

Of this sum, $5,000,000 will be spent in the District of Columbia, $4,450,000 in Maryland, $4,250,000 in Virginia, and $2,400,000 in West Virginia. At the beginning of this year, there were 67,721 Bell telephone lines in use in this territory, and it is estimated that users will make 1,165,000 calls during the year from these telephones.

HEREAFTER

A farmer and his son were working in a field when the old man tripped on the stump of a tree and fell. He got up and said, "Good day that stump. I wish it was in hell."

"Pop, I wouldn't say that," said the boy, "you might stumble over that stump again some day."

THE MAN TURNS

By HOWE EVANS

(By McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (Copyright 1932 by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

FROM her seat in the breakfast room, pretty little Madge Burton looked over her husband's immaculate kitchen, and watched wistfully her preparations for Junior's lunch. "I ought to go home and wash my dishes, but as long as I've taken your advice and given up my position, I hope you won't mind if I stiffen my spine a little by detailing the reasons."

"Shoot; I'm going to make you a cup of coffee before you go."

"Thanks. I need it. I feel awfully shaky. I—I was counting up last night. In the four years Jim and I have been married, he has held an even dozen different positions."

"You mean just that many?" Vera's energetic young voice sounded explosive. She had none of Madge's yielding softness of voice or manner. "That's the limit, honest it is. You have had the same job all that time and supported Jim in between his."

Madge shook her blond head thoughtfully.

"That's hardly fair, Vera. He's never been lazy or idle very long and when he has been out of work he has done everything around the house, cooked and cleaned and—well, I love him more than I ever did, but as you say, I've been spelling him."

"His mother did that before you ever met him!" Vera spilled hot water on the stove emphasizing her words.

Madge smiled wearily. "You just can't blame him. He is such an adorable little fellow and he has his own way about everything."

"Yes, and a stubborn mule when anybody tries to boss him."

"Fortunately they seem to realize that where he is now and give him his head. He seems better satisfied than he has ever been before and he's been promised more money next week."

Slipping her coffee Madge was gazing with dreamy satisfaction at the little bungalow next door. Suddenly, she leaned forward, a quick gasp to her voice.

"Oh dear, I spoke too soon! There's Jim coming now and I can't tell by the way he walks that he's mad and has quit another job!"

Vera followed her to the door, catching one slim arm and pressing it hard.

"Don't weaken now! If you do—If you go back to work you are lost. You'll never have the nerve to take such a stand again."

"Don't worry! Madge's large nubby eyes glowed. 'I'm sure I'm doing the best thing for both of us. I'll stick it out!'"

Jim was hanging up his coat as she came to the front door.

"What's happened, darling, are you sick? You look so white—and sort of queer?" Hands grasping her shoulders, he started at her anxiously.

"The tension in his voice, the concern to his usually laughing eyes was more than Madge could stand. With a sob she jerked away from him and ran into the dining room, buried her head in the couch pillows.

Jim followed and sitting down pulled her into his arms.

"What's happened? Are you sick? Shall I phone for the doctor? I never saw you like this before!"

Recalling Vera's advice, Madge choked back her sobs. She must be calm. Pressing her head against his shoulder she murmured sadly:

"The doctor tried to tell me, I know you have quit again, just when everything seemed to be going along so fine and I had planned—"

She felt the stiffen at the unexpected remark as she burst out, "Let me finish before you say anything, Jim. I didn't tell you I was going to resign my position today. I want to surprise you. Oh, Jim, I'm just tired of leading you home and going out to work every day. I want to stay home like my friends, do a really good job of housekeeping, and I hoped I could with things going so well for me."

Jim interrupted in so stern a voice that she sat up to look at him.

"You mean you are tired of the office? I thought you were so sold on the whole bunch down there that you wouldn't give up your job, that you'd give me up first!"

She straightened, bracing herself, expecting one of his beseeching looks.

Instead he whistled, gave her one long, very serious look, glanced at his watch and jumped to his feet.

Bewildered, Madge watched him for a second, then sprang up, catching at his arm.

"I'm sorry, Jim. I didn't think you'd mind. Where are you going, Jim?"

"Back to the office," he tried to loosen her frantic hold.

"But how can you, if you're quit?"

"Someday he seemed bigger, older; she was almost afraid of this new mood."

"You and I are the only ones who know that. I just walked out when the chief started talking on some other line, but I can catch that next train. I can walk back and tell him I'll shoot them through in fine style and double the company's profits."

His arms around her, he gave her a quick, hard kiss.

"We can't both quit, so since you beat me to it—" He smiled, his eyes softening.

Madge, "I'm glad I'll be home at the usual time for dinner. You won't have to rush so, getting things ready, maybe you'll feel like a movie afterwards."

Madge, which left Madge tingling, and Jim was out of the house, running for his train.

TELEPHONE SYMBOL OF TIMES, SAYS WRITER

Modern Communication Called Index of National Character

"America's greatest timeserver" is the term applied to the telephone in an article by F. D. McHugh in a recent issue of the Scientific American.

The author declares that the telephone has come to be almost as important to Americans as speech itself, and that it is one of the outstanding symbols of the modern age, for business and industry could no more function without it—properly and at their present tempo—than they could function without the swift carriers of commerce.

Telephone, declares the author, with both wire and radio mediums at its command, represents our most efficient means of fast communication, and the degree to which it is used in various countries should be, to a certain extent, a fair index of national character.

He also points out that since man first began to utter intelligible sounds, he has felt the need of methods of sending his messages to distant points and of disseminating widely his ideas for the edification or information of all. He has progressed through the communication era of drum, fire, smoke and courier methods, to the telegraph, the telephone and the radio and television. Coming after the telegraph, the telephone has surpassed it, while television, when made commercially practical, would appear to be an advance rather than a competitor of voice communication.

The significant rise, year by year, in the number of telephones in use in the United States since 1876, is shown by the fact that not until after 1900 were there as many as two telephones for each 100 of our population. In 1905 the figure rose to about five per hundred population, and in 1915 it was over ten per hundred. The twelve mark was reached in 1920, and in 1925 it was well over fourteen. The figure now is about sixteen per each hundred population in the United States.

Clown: "Look here, I object to going on right after that monkey act."

Circus Master: "You're right, they may think it's an encore."

Doctor: "What you need, my dear young lady, is a little sun and air."
