Detroit Worker To Assist Rev. Palmer For Six Weeks; Seek 50 New Members By Jan. 1

Two definite lines of action will be followed by the Baptist Church this fall, a study and re-organization of the church's program, and the addition of 50 new members to the church by January 1.

Miss Dela Green, field worker for the religious education department of the Detroit Baptist Missionary Society, will act as assistant to Rev. E. W. Palmer for six weeks. She will make a complete study of the program, and where necessary assist in re-organization of societies and departments.

She will also conduct a teachers' training class each Friday night from 7:30 to 9:30, following standard work for all denominations and open to anyone who cares to attend. A junior missionary class will be conducted on the same evenings by the Pastor.

Every night this week one or more cottage prayer meetings are being held, as part of the campaign for new members. Next week workers will call on every home now represented in the church and Bible school, and the third week services will be held each night at the church, with outstanding preachers from other churches occupying the pulpit.

How do you tell the age of trees?

Up until Monday of this week, the writer would have been obliged to cut the tree down to find out. Counting the rings in the stump was the only method she had ever heard about.

There is another, simpler and infinitely more desirable way to count up the years a tree has lived. First the sucker after knowledge should have information about how old a seedling is when it first puts out a set of branches. After that it is simple. Just add a year for every whorl of branches.

Take a white spruce, a lovely symmetrical tree, sturdy, gracious, beautiful. It is nine years old when the branches begin to arrive in "whorls" or sets, one above the other. For every year the spruce has lived since then, there is a whorl of branches.

L. J. McLean is superintending the purchase, removal and transplanting of nearly 177 such trees from the tip of the lower peninsula to Rosedale Gardens, at the behest of Henry Sheldon, president of the Sheldon Land Company.

It is Mr. Sheldon's idea that Rosedale Gardens shall become a community where the average man may live in peace and seclusion from the noise, confusion and bustle of an industrial city. It is not enough for him that the Gardens are located four miles from the city limits, and that there is the beauty and order of quiet fields and woods. There is the broad highway with its roaring freight of motor cars.

Altogether there are more than 1500 ornamental trees in Rosedale Gardens. Interesting to many are the double flowering cherry trees from Japan and from China, the same species made famous by the row along the Potomac in Washington, D. C. English hawthorne and roses are a charming addition to the effect of borders along the drives intersecting the Gardens.

LEONARD URGES CARE REGARDING CHANGES IN LAW

Points Out Difference Between Statutes And Amendments At Club Meeting

That citizens approach the matter of voting on the proposed amendments to the Michigan constitution with full realization that an affirmative vote will put things into the fundamental law of the State which cannot easily be taken out, was urged by Archie G. Leonard at Farmington Exchange Club Wednesday noon.

Mr. Leonard pointed out the vast difference between enacting statutes and passing amendments to the Constitution. Statutes may be rescinded by the Legislature but an amendment adopted by the people must be repealed by the people, which is rarely accomplished. He suggested that most of the amendments represent experiments.

This particularly applies, Mr. Leonard indicated, to the tax limitation amendments, No. 2 and 4. As to No. 7, which would limit those eligible to vote on bond issues to those citizens who own property, he asserted that records of school districts, where this rule obtains, show that property owners are more careful in voting bond issues during prosperous times than are non property owners. He opposed Proposal No. 1 as removing all liquor control from the State.

Mr. Leonard was the guest of Emory Hatton. Members submitted their guesses on the national election by States, the results to be read next Wednesday.

In a straw vote, Hoover polled 16, to 4 for Roosevelt, with Brucker and Comstock getting exactly the same 16 to 4. The Red, White and Blue liquor amendment lost, 9 to 11, although a vote on "straight wet or dry" won, 32 to 8.

The 15-mill limitation on taxes on real estate won, 12 to 7.

SERGEANT YORK
TALKS FOR DRYS
AT M. E. CHURCH

War Hero Pledges Many To Prayers For Success Of Prohibition

Sergeant Alvin C. York, World War hero and missionary for education in his native Tennessee mountains, in Farmington at the M. E. Community Hall Monday afternoon, argued for prohibition as a great moral force for American youth.

Prohibition, Sergeant York said, has removed the immediate temptation of strong drink from growing boys, and has made their fathers steadier and soberer.

The man who formerly spent the family's income on liquor, while his children lacked food and clothing, now saves his money and provides properly for his family, the sergeant stated.

"Prohibition at its worse is better than the saloon days at their best," Sergeant York said. Requesting that those who would pray daily until election that prohibition be retained raise their hands, he remarked that more than 25,000 had made this pledge in Michigan in the last three weeks. A majority of the adults in the audience pledged themselves to pray Monday.

The sergeant also related the events of October 3, 1918, when he and six other American soldiers, all who remained uninjured of a group of 17 that had gone out to silence a German machine gun company, captured 132 prisoners.

On the night before this feat, he prayed from 10 o'clock until 4 o'clock, he said. The attack began at 6:10 a. m.

A plea to the drys of Farmington to organize and vote was delivered by Colonel Frank B. Eberhart, a Los Angeles attorney, acting as a representative of the Michigan Anti-Saloon League, which sponsored the visit of Sergeant York to Farmington.

Rev. Elmer W. Palmer presided at the meeting. About 225, including a large number of high school children, were present.
