Mary Had a Little Lamb

By JANE OSBORN
© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

IT WAS the summer after Mary Lester's sophomore year in the state university that she met Bob Lamb at a country house-party. Bob Lamb had just finished his junior year at a small college in the state. It was the end of the first day at the hospitable old farmhouse that Mary liked Bob and that Bob was keen about Mary. But Bob thought he had no right to speak about marriage a year more of college and it would be still another year—whatever work he took up—before he could think of supporting a wife. But he did not hesitate to tell Mary of his feelings for her. For the time all he begged of her was that she would permit him to be somewhere near her. It was Mary's idea, then, that Bob should transfer cases at the smaller college and himself from the smaller college and enter the senior class of the university she attended.

So when Mary went back to college it was noised about that she had brought a heavy suitcase with her. The girls in her fraternity house laughed at her and with her. Then one of them sitting at the piano began softly playing the strains of "Mary Had a Little Lamb."

The girls took up the words and Mary sat there blushing. "But Bob's fleece isn't as white as snow," protested Mary weakly. "He has black hair."

She did follow you to school one day—you'll have to admit that," laughed one of the girls, and they went on singing their song. Bob Lamb had been transferred from the college he attended to the chapter in the university where it was soon passed around that he had a girl to thank for the transfer. "Nice girl—Mary Lester—a Junior Gammie singer," informed one of the men. "Some one ought to drop a few words of thanks to Mary—she did us a good turn."

One of the men who had listened to the remaining songs to whistled the tune. "Some one ought to drop a few words of thanks to Mary—she did us a good turn."

Tells Value Of Farmington Band

Leader of Organization Is Speaker at Exchange Club Meeting

A history of Farmington bands, and particularly the present high school and community band which in a few years has built up a fine record of achievement, was related before Farmington Exchange Club Wednesday noon by Edward Eaton, leader of the musical organization.

Mr. Eaton's interesting narrative told of the transformation of the present band at the end of its first year from an orchestra into a band. He included in his narrative a fact not generally known before, that in its first State contest, the Farmington band lost third and possibly second place because a cornet-player (whom he left nameless) got stage-fright over his first appearance in competition and "panked out" on his cornet solo, making Farmington third for that rank.

There were bands in Farmington before the present one, Mr. Eaton related, there having been one started in 1898 and another in 1914. These disbanded after a few weeks, a third lasting only a few weeks. The present band was started as a school musical organization, largely through the effort, Mr. Eaton said, of that year's Farmington band leader, Mr. Lamb. After its first year as an orchestra continuous development of the band has brought it invitations to play at fairs, over the radio, in parades, etc. Last Thursday the band played at the parade in Santa Claus parade, and being the only band to march, it had the honor of playing for "Santa Claus" just prior to his address on Woodward avenue.

"I've Never Driven A Car Like The NEW FORD Eight"

"I've owned automobiles for a good many years," writes a prominent motorist, "but I've never driven a car like this New Ford Eight."

"I had heard people speak of it as a great car, and I was prepared for something unusual, but such remarkable smoothness and riding comfort were wholly unexpected.

"It isn't only that it is fast and quiet and comfortable, but there's a rhythm and balance to it that I've never had in any car."

Drive it yourself—today—and let it tell its own story.

Bob Lamb had been transferred from the college he attended to the chapter in the university where it was soon passed around that he had a girl to thank for the transfer. "Nice girl—Mary Lester—a Junior Gammie singer," informed one of the men. "Some one ought to drop a few words of thanks to Mary—she did us a good turn."

One of the men who had listened to the remaining songs to whistled the tune. "Some one ought to drop a few words of thanks to Mary—she did us a good turn."

So after the end of Mary's junior year and Bob Lamb's senior year they felt that they had seen far too little of one another. Bob was going to New York to go into business with his uncle and Mary would be back at college for her final year—a thousand miles from New York.

Bob heard of a college camp somewhere in the next state. There was a tent colony for the men and another for the women—a study camp where a serious-minded student went to study astronomy under the direction of a number of renowned astronomers. Neither Bob nor Mary had ever felt more than a passing interest in the study of the stars, but at least they would be opportunity to see each other at lectures and on observation excursions. They could sit together in the evening on mountain tops gazing at the stars. True, there would be the other students and the learned professors, but there would be no one to tease them. They needn't let anyone know that they had ever met before. It was Mary's idea that their names must not go with them. Some one might think of the stupid song about Mary and her little lamb. It would be simple enough in Mary's case. She could easily use her middle name, Ella, as a cover-up for her name. It seemed as if everyone took up the air—whistling or warbling as they went. Then some one began singing the words, "Ella had a little Lamb, his fleece was black as coal."
