and news, especially salaries of all teachers and employes in Farmington Schools, adopted last week by the Board of Education as a last resort to keep the schools open. The Enterprise bearing the sad news, especially to the teachers, had been out but a few hours before rumblings were heard of reaction to the cut. A board member reported that he had already been treated to a pretty good "calling down" for the action the board had taken. "From whom," he was asked, "Which one of the teachers?"

His answer was a surprise. "None of the teachers," he replied, "It was one of our taxpayers. Of course it will be a blow to the teachers, and we greatly regret it, but to 'get it' from a taxpayer-I don't know what to think about it yet."

So, apparently, it goes. Criticism frequently comes, not from places where one would think it likely to develop, but from most unexpected sources. And it seems to come regardless of what is done.

Nearly everybody in this country is pretty hard up, and ye almost everyone of us can console ourselves with the fact that Clarenceville Methodist Church there are many less fortunate than we. Most of us, in comparison with millions of others actually do not know what suffering is.

But some in this community do know suffering, and for the the rest of us, every one, can do just a little bit in the coming two weeks. When we go into the grocery store, we can drop into the weigh to feed the needy families this holiday season. A can of ver-etables, fruit, or the like, a few pounds of sugar, or anything vantue families that be high choose—it does not peed to be much, for if everyone lends a hand the barrels will be filled. They need to be this year more than ever, for never before have so many been in distres. Fill the barrels—the remembrance that you have helped make your own holiday season happier. however we may disagree with them, are grown-up men, and thus a bit too adult for such childish tactics, one fact was overlooked in setting forth this theory. That is, that the signs had been hung up several days before anything appeared in the Enterprise, hav-ing been covered with brown cloth tacked over the face of the signs until the road was opened. A few observant citizens of Farmington had noted the covered-up signs, were speculating on what was beneath these strips of cloth, and were trying to devise a way to find out, when the Cut-off was opened and the signs uncovered last Friday

Many a theory has been exploded by a calendar or a clock.

Nation Without Newspapers

(Royal Oak Tribune)

A Rotary club speaker recently remarked that China, with its 450,000,000 people, has only 12 newspapers. Such a state of things goes far to account for the condition of that great land.

The Chinese are one of the world's most industrious They should have a leading place in world progress. But they have no system for distributing intelligence through newspapers. If there are progressive movements in a city, they have no newspapers to inform the people about these ideas, and to enlist support for them. If you could establish newspapers in every sizable town in China. and teach the people to read the nation could be transformed in 10 years.

In that fact there is a lesson for us even here in Michigan. A community in which newspapers are not well supported, lacks very much of the machinery by which sentiment is organized for progressive movements.
