Relaxation in Fishing
The best to be had from fishing is not the number of fish on the string. It's the relaxation, the escape from the tension of a high-pressure age; a rest period in an intense daily conflict. It's the discovery of a place in which to be alone. It's the communion with nature, of which every man, poor or rich, has need.—Exchange.

No wonder John Garner wanted those new postoffice buildings. Just see who is going to occupy them the next four years.

SLATS' DIARY

DOM PEDRO AIDED BELL TO EXHIBIT TELEPHONE

Opening of Service to Rio Recalls Historic Event

Brazil is the fourth South American nation to be brought within reach of United States telephones, the others being Argentina, Chile and Uruguay. Telephone service between this country and Rio de Janeiro, chief city of the South American republic, was formally opened on December 18, 1931.

Gained Recognition for Bell

It is particularly fitting that the new Brazilian service be made available to all telephones in the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico, not only because Brazil was the first South American country to establish telephone service, but also because of an event which took place at the International Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia in 1876, where Alexander Graham Bell was exhibiting a model of his newly invented telephone.

Scant recognition had been given the new invention during the early weeks it had been on exhibition, until Dom Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, happened along on June 25. In simple friendliness to the young man who had several months before shown him the work he was doing for the day in Boston, the Emperor cordially asked to see what he had invented. On hearing a demonstration of it, he uttered his now famous words, "My God! It talks!" and it was that expression of astonishment on the part of the Brazilian Emperor that led scientists and others to take notice of the invention and realize that something of great practical value had come into the world.

Circuit Covers 4,800 Miles

The very next year, 1877, the first telephones were introduced into Brazil. They were installed on private lines. "Long" telephone exchanges had not yet been established even in the United States. In 1878, His Majesty's government granted the first concession for local telephone exchange service, and in 1879, the first Brazilian telephone company, Companhia Telephonica do Brazil, was organized.

Connection to Brazil is established over a short-wave radio telephone channel 4,800 miles in length between the transoceanic stations of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company at Lawrenceville and Newburg, N. C., and stations operated by the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation near Rio de Janeiro. These stations connect with the lines of the Brazilian Telephone Company.

OAKLAND COUNTY LEADS IN TAKING FURS IN STATE

Oakland County, having one of the largest centers of population in Michigan, and generally considered as a purely industrial area, is one of the three leading counties in the take of furs, according to the Department of Conservation's records. In determining where pelts were taken the Department has used the post office addresses of the trappers as the best available indication.

Ottawa County produced more muskrats in 1931-32 than any other county with 16,826 obtained by residents of that county. Oakland county was second with 14,654 and Allegan was third with 14,510.

Oakland County was first in the number of mink taken, reporting 430. Allegan was second with 400. Of the 12,454 mink taken, 8,099 were in the southern half of the lower peninsula.
