

Vandals Hit Fire Alarms At C'ville

By EDWARD WENDOVER
 Vandalism to fire alarms at Clarenceville High School has been so great the past month that school officials have had to turn off the alarm system. Edward J. Salisz, Clarenceville schools' business manager, told the school board at its meeting Thursday that "the last couple weeks, we had to turn the alarm system off or it would be going constantly." The board was presented a special report on vandalism to the district's schools during the month of November and learned that it cost the schools nearly $461 during that period of time. This excludes theft, Salisz said. The monthly vandalism report was drawn up at the board's request, which was made a month ago when an interim financial report showed that vandalism to Clarenceville schools between May 1 and Nov. 1 cost $4,725 to repair. The monthly vandalism report showed that most of the damage - priced at $331 - occurred at the high school usually and involved fire alarms, extinguishers and hoses. Dr. Ray Renbarger, Clarenceville High School principal, told the board that Salisz said there is already a policy of giving a $25 reward to anyone supplying information that leads to arrest of vandals.

While the board took no formal action on the matter, it asked Renbarger to take measures to curb the destruction of school property.

possibility of instituting a secret witness program and Salisz said there is already a policy of giving a $25 reward to anyone supplying information that leads to arrest of vandals.
