SUMMER OPERA SEASON TO END SUNDAY NIGHT

Opera Under The Stars is finishing its first summer season of outdoor musical shows in a blaze of glory. The season ends on next Sunday night, September 1, with the final performance of the sparkling musical comedy "The Gay Divorcee" which is proving to be one of the biggest hits of the summer.

The idea originated last Spring when a large group of prominent Detroiters gathered together and laid careful plans, determined that Detroit needed and would have outdoor musical entertainment during the summer months.

Detroit is the first city in the country to utilize a baseball park as a theatre, with its mammoth portable stage, and the second city to enjoy such summer entertainment. Now that the season is practically at a close it can be said that the initial effort has met with success in every stage of the way. The portable stage proved effective, the public took to the idea of outdoor shows and the season has been a successful one. Ten shows were given during the twelve week summer season. Originally twelve were scheduled but the popularity of both "Rose Marie" and "Vaughan-Kline" necessitated their being held over for a second week. The ten productions presented were: Student Prince, Rose Marie, My Maryland, Hither Sweet, Blossom Time, Last Waltz, Countess Maritana, Vaudeville King, Naughty Marietta and Gay Divorcee.

With the close of the season at hand it is natural that the question should arise as to another year. Will there be another season of outdoor musical shows in 1936? That alone can be answered by those who have witnessed the shows this summer. If they want another season it rests entirely in their hands. Assuming that there might be another year, many have suggested that through the cooperation of the City and Cleveland citizens, that Detroit could possibly have a great outdoor theatre in which Opera Under The Stars' performances, as well as many other events could be held. There is a need for such a place in the city, but this again depends upon whether it is sufficiently desired.

Opera Under The Stars takes its leave, after having made the entire theatrical world here to a hold here and provided genuine entertainment that the public enjoyed.

New Director Appointed For Fisheries Research

Dr. A. S. Hazzard, formerly associate professor of aquatic biology for the United States Bureau of Fisheries at Salt Lake City, Utah, has been appointed director of Michigan's Institute for Fisheries Research.

Dr. Hazzard will succeed Dr. Carl H. Hubbs of the University of Michigan. For some time past the press of Dr. Hubbs' work at the University has been making it increasingly difficult for him to carry the work and responsibility of directing the Institute program. Dr. Hubbs has become widely known throughout Michigan, in part through his connection with the Institute, directing inland lake surveys and lake and stream improvement projects in many parts of the state.

The Institute is financed by the Department of Conservation to handle investigations and research on fisheries problems of a scientific nature. It will continue to have its office at the University museum where office and laboratory facilities are provided by the University of Michigan.

Old Grad Week

By JAMES BOLGER
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate, N.Y. Service.

"A I live and breathe, it's my old pal and classmate, Matt Brown. . . Meet my son, Matt." "Charley Davis! Meet my boy, too, Charley."

Old Grad week in Pleasantville, and that scene was repeated hundreds of times during the day.

Matt Brown wandered about on his old grounds. A huge smile on his face, he kept chuckling and always that right hand was ready and willing to clasp the hand of an old classmate.

By his side strode his boy, Jerry. He ran the mile in the fastest distance clocked, and the other boys pointed him out to their fathers as "the old man's boy."

Jerry seemed to hear the comments, but Matt did, and his heart was warm within him that his boy had done so well.

"Tell me, Jerry," he said, "there's something in the air. To come back to the old school and march along with your old classmates. Just wait till you've been out as long as I have, and then see how you feel about it."

He chuckled again and glanced at Matt. That a shadow had crossed Jerry's face and there seemed to be a look of pain in his eyes.

"I guess so, dad. I'll probably feel the same way."

Matt faced the boy squarely. "Tell me, Jerry," he said, quietly, his broad face set in determined lines, "the same determination that had enabled him to reach the top in a hard fighting world. 'There's something wrong, and I want you to let me help you. Is it your exam?'"

"No," said the boy. "I'm third man in my class."

"Well, then, what else can it be? Is it a girl? Money? I can't think of anything else. You know, Jerry, that I'm willing to back you to the limit. You don't have to hesitate around your old dad."

"I'd like to ask a favor of you, dad," Jerry said suddenly, swiftly. "Then—'But—no, I guess I'd better not.'"

"Jerry!" There was startled surprise in the older man's voice. "Jerry, haven't I always loved you and helped you? Have I ever failed you in any way whatever?"

"Dad, you've been the best dad to me that anyone could have been. That's why it seems so small to find fault now."

He seemed to swallow a lump in his throat. "It's about your introducing me to everybody as your boy. Couldn't you change it? It would mean so much to me."

Jerry tried to see his dad's face but it was turned from him. Matt Brown seemed very interested in a group of grade across the street. Strange how they seemed so dim and distant.

"I understand, Jerry," he said slowly, thickly. "I—I guess I've been selfish, my boy. I'll try not to be that way again."

Jerry threw up his hands. "I know it would hurt you," he cried. "But I thought—" his voice faltered for a moment. He was thinking of the boy he'd never known. He went on after a little silence. "I want and realize all you've done for me, dad. I can never repay you. You never did more for me than the fact that I was your adopted son. It never was a shock to me to find it out later. But you don't know how I envy the fellows around here. . ."

He looked at Matt again to see how he was taking it. But Matt suddenly kept watching the group on the other side. Jerry shrugged his shoulders. There was a helpless note in his voice now.

"Gee, dad," he said. "I didn't realize that you would make it so hard. Can't you see it my way?" But as the other still did not answer he seemed to sense the futility of his hopes. "Just say anything," he muttered, "it doesn't matter now."

Matt faced him with a stern eyes that had a vague hurt in them. He spoke quietly. "I'll call you anything you want, Jerry," he promised. "Just tell me."

"Will you, dad? Just once, at least?" Jerry's eyes were bright, his face was flushed with some inner joy. "Dad, just once call me your son when you introduce me?"

"Jerry!" There was a hush in Matt Brown's usually controlled voice, a mistiness in his eyes that made Jerry seem blurred and indistinct. "And all the time I thought—" his voice broke. He held out both hands. "Jerry, my son!"

They stood there, soul to soul. Suddenly a hand was placed on Matt Brown's shoulder. Matt turned. Could he trust his voice not to break?

"Dan Morrison! Meet my son, Jerry!"

Dan Morrison wondered at the fierce pride that was in good old Matt's voice as he introduced his son. Then he remembered. After all, it isn't everyone who has a son who is such a famous track man. No, sir!

To Begin Saturday Legion Gala Days

Its place in this year's program with three games to be played: Saturday, Walled Lake vs. Garden City; Sunday, Haggerty-Schraeder-Plymouth vs. Olin Russell, Inc. On Monday the two winning teams will play against each other. All games are scheduled to begin at three o'clock.

Free acts will be given several times daily in addition to the other attractions which have been engaged for the entertainment of those who attend the Celebration. Saturday and Monday evenings there will be dancing to the music of Doug's Melody Makers.

The first event after the band concert Monday morning at 10 will be a horsemanship tournament with three prizes for the highest singles and two prizes for the winning doubles.

The remainder of the program will consist of athletic events for men, women and children, a pie eating contest, an orange diving contest, a sandcastle scramble, and many other events for which prizes will be awarded.

Climaxing the American Legion Gala Day and Homecoming celebration will be a drawing for the grand prize at 10:15 Monday night. This will follow a drawing for 40 valuable prizes contributed by merchants and business men and women in Farmington and vicinity.

Federal Hatcheries
There are 54 federal fish hatchery stations and substations, and the largest in ground space and pond area is at Marion, Ohio. The largest in output is at Hootbay Harbor, Maine.

World's Silver Supply
North America produces three-fourths of the world's silver.

Do Not Neglect Your Home

Splintery steps, a sagging porch, cracked sidewalks, warped boards, are not the elements of a good picture. And yet that will make up the picture your neighbors will have of your home if you neglect the repairs that it needs.

The longer you delay having repairs made, the more costly they will be. Now, while the prices of materials and labor costs are low, is the time to have this work done.

We carry a complete line of nationally known building materials. Buy your supplies now and prepare for winter weather.
