She Braved Quake With Flashlight

Immediately after the worst quake in the series of earth tremors at Helena, Mont., last October, when the city was without light and her own home had been seriously damaged, a telephone operator hurried out on the street to go to the central office to help during the emergency that she knew had arisen. The city was in total darkness and panic was in the air, but she groped her way several blocks to a corner where a man was standing holding a flashlight.

"Will you help me get to the telephone office?" she asked.

"What do you want to go there for?" the man asked.

"I'm an operator and I'm going to work," she replied.

"—— If you're going to work at a time like this you can have my flashlight," the man said in amazement as he proffered the light.

She took it and, with the light it afforded, arrived safely at the office. She later advertised in the newspaper in an effort to return the light to its owner, but was unable to locate him.

SPEAKING OF Treasure . . .

Mother Nature laid away more treasure one hundred million years ago in one small district in West Virginia than all the buried pirate gold in the world. This is the area where BLUE BEACON coal is mined. The firm structure of this coal makes it the cleanest and hottest of all furnace coals—and better still, 8 tons of BLUE BEACON go as far as 10 of ordinary coal. Call us today—and find out about a real heating treasure.

Mann, Clarkston guard, with ten points to his credit, shared scoring honors with Hamilton.

The Farmington second team defeated the Clarkston subs 25-5. After the first few minutes, it was a one-sided game Farmington completely outclassing their opponents. Grace was high point man with ten points, double what the entire Clarkston team was able to score.

The Farmington subs have the best second team record in the league having six wins and two losses.
