By ANNE M. PHILLIPS MA 6-6335

A Roman orgie in Williamsburg! That is certainly putting widely separated civilizations together. But that is what Bill and Helen Weighman did last Saturday.

BILL HAS a retiree's estate on Main in Southfield which he calls "Williamsburg."

Here he has the equipment to make the unusual, very interesting and very clever things for which he has a talent. This year he built a Roman Forum, a chariot with horse, plus other things needed to turn his rear acreage into a setting for this affair.

At least 150 invitations were sent out to Wood Creekers, former Wood Creekers, plus a few who are very closely allied to Wood Creek. Costumes were requested and there certainly were some very clever ones. There was horse racing, much picture taking, lots of the conviviality for which Wood Creek is so famous.

Conrad Lam made a speech from the Forum, in Latin, but which had been considerably put on paper with the English translation at the bottom for those who might need it.

Of course, when the time came for the "orgie" it was our Dick Carlson who presided. He had a delicious duck, the huge haunch of beef, spare ribs, turkey, salads, ice cream—all so good, everyone over ate.

As darkness fell we all went home with another very happy occasion to remember.

When ceremonies are held July 25 to dedicate the old maple tree on Gill as a historic site it would only be appropriate that lemonade be among the refreshments served.

From the first leak of news that a dedication ceremony would be held for the giant maple the words of Dale Carnegie have stuck in my mind.

That is exactly what has been done by the City of Farmington officials who deserve credit for their ability of squeezing the last ounce of juice from a former fat lemon. The city fathers have not only saved the old tree but are now making the most of an old controversy and have reversed an image which never really was correct anyhow.

When the plight of the tree first became known, the council was cast in the stereotypical role of bureaucratic goals oblivious to the beauty of nature and intent on destroying heritage for the sake of progress, etc.

Of course, you don't initially engineer a paving project and design the pavement around a tree at an additional cost of $1,000. You especially don't do this when money is tight reversed an image which never really was correct anyhow.

When the plight of the tree first became known, the council was cast in the stereotypical role of bureaucratic goals oblivious to the beauty of nature and intent on destroying heritage for the sake of progress, etc.

Of course, you don't initially engineer a paving project and design the pavement around a tree at an additional cost of $1,000. You especially don't do this when money is tight and taxpayers are uptight.

WHEN THE paving work started on Gill, residents on the street realized their large maple was in danger. A well-organized protest was set in motion with demonstrations, a court injunction, delegation appearing at the next council meeting, etc.

The council immediately responded by acquiescing the lemon. Not only did they save the tree by relocating the pavement but also elected to fill a deep drainage ditch along Gill which if left open would have remained an eye-sore and hazard.

Thus, in order to appease protesting residents and save the tree, the scope of the job was expanded to include the much needed enclosure of the drainage ditch.

Since that time, the city fathers have been working with residents on Gill to gather information on the tree to designate it as an official historic site.

Those former "politicians" have become "statesmen" who have joined the ranks of those staunch protectors of nature, beauty, heritage, etc. The former enemies of "the people" have become allies.

The skeptics will point out that there's a city decision this fall and somebody is trying to make hay out of a maple. But the tree should have been saved, the ditch needed to be enclosed and the ceremony is every fitting way to kick-off the Festival.

However, there just has to be a lemonade stand underneath those spreading maple limbs to soothe the spectators on a hot summer day.

Who's Out Of Step?

EDITOR: Referring to your editorials concerning the fiasco the Farmington Board of Education is still promoting (i.e. sex education, minority understanding, etc., (and in passing let me say, every article you write with your byline is an editorial, not an unbiased "fact only" report that any other reporter would produce), I wish to make the following comments and observations:

It is difficult to distinguish fact from opinion from your reporting without feeling everyone else is out of step. Someone every effort by concerned parents is countered by great indications of defensiveness.

It would not appear to be out of order to suggest all of us make an honest evaluation of today's facts. Can I suggest a thoughtful study to determine the feasibility of a pseudo-board of education being able to decide what is best for children?

A thoughtful approach now would prove substantially more rewarding than the inevitable emotional program the board is recommending which could be forced on parents to adopt.

Let's not keep adding brute strength at each end of this interminable tug-of-war, but one that depicts a greater concern between dedicated people who are family oriented and the equally dedicated people who are liberal.

A cornerstone for a program which is for everyone is better than buying a grave marker for people who feel that they have lost.

Why Two Tax Votes?

EDITOR: I would like to object to the special school millage election Aug. 23 to try to pass millage when this issue was turned down by the voters just in June.

How come the school board can spend our money for this purpose within three months of its being rejected. I see their point, of course, hoping that just the people who are for millage will come out to vote since no other issues are at stake, but I just don't think it is fair.

Scouts Are Given Credit

EDITOR: I would like to publicly thank the City of Farmington Beautification Committee, Mrs. Janet Kozub, Scoutmaster Jack Burnette of Troop 179 and, especially, the young men of Troop 179 who so unselfishly gave of their time and effort to help beautify my home.

It was heartwarming to see the young men work so diligently at tasks I am personally unable to do because of my incapacitating back injury. I hope to be able to repay them in some manner when I am financially and physically better, but feel that public mention of their civic pride would be quite meaningful to them now.

Their willingness to give of themselves more than enforces my belief that when I moved to Farmington, I moved to a concerned, civically-minded community. Again, thank you Troop 179. They're the greatest!

Check-Up For Safety

Know how makes the difference when it comes to being sure you are driving a safe vehicle.

As a driver, you can only tell when the brake pedal goes too far before taking effect. But, a competent mechanic can check all parts of your brake system thoroughly.

Michigan State University's Highway Traffic Safety Center reminds you that state and local police are checking vehicles. Therefore, treat your vehicle to a mechanical check-up regularly.
