

N. H. Power, Symbol of The Community, Passes

by the occasional "prim" of the familiar initials. "N. H." following an historical article of a tender obituary in The Enterprise.

But no collection of data, and no other person, will step into the shoes of the deceased. "N. H." yesterday's Detroit paper there was a mention that "Bill Smith died in New York. Folks around here will want to know more about that. His people lived here 40 years ago. He became quite a big man, down East. A lot of people here will remember him." Then the unfaded, accurate and amazingly detailed story of the man's life and family and connections and achievements. An incident, which, though repeated hundreds of times, still left one breathless, with surprise and admiration on each occasion.

Although it must have been largely unborn, his inclination to read history and biography (he was a voluminous reader of both) may have received great impetus from an occurrence in his youth that was one of the most spectacular in the history of Farmington. This was the great fire which occurred in 1871, when he was 11 years old, and concerning which he often related dozens of striking incidents so vividly that it might have happened but yesterday. He grew up, too, in a keenly historical period and atmosphere, when the Civil War and Abraham Lincoln were fresh, personal memories for much of the country.

Returning to conclude his days in Farmington, he sunk his roots deeper into the soil of his community and that of his fathers. Like those of a great tree, his roots reached out in every direction into the community's life, and like the tree which draws through its roots nourishment from the earth, so he drew his supreme satisfaction and enjoyment in life from his close contact with everything akin to Farmington. But like the tree, he also gave greatly to that from which he received. As the tree's roots serve to bind the earth together about them, so did Nathan Power, become one of the strongest forces to bind the community together and foster a community spirit—a spirit fast declining in the American scene. Thus he was, truly, a very expression and symbol of Farmington. One knew not how to begin, or what to say—and most of all one knows not how to close the effort that could not but be a poor one, the chronicle of this life. There should be something that would speak much in a few words. One wishes it might have been something of his own choosing, like that on the monument of a member of his family in Oakwood Cemetery, which he often mentioned. The one that says only this: "With Farragut at Mobile Bay." Just which Power it was among Farmington's earlier citizens who chose that for his final inscription escapes memory now. That's just it. If "Nate" were still here he would know and instantly provide the entire story. One cannot complete even his obituary without feeling the need for him.

So, indeed, one knows not how to conclude. Except that one feels and knows (and may not this be the greatest tribute of all?) that: "We shall not see his like again."

Foster Family Group Living in Farmington

The first ones of a family group to locate in Farmington were Mr. and Mrs. Olan Foster who moved from Detroit into the home owned by Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Johnson at 3301 South Farmington Road. Ann, aged 33, Mrs. Foster's mother, Mrs. Rose Lutz and sons, Henry and Ted, also of Detroit, purchased and moved into the home at 3270 Grand River. Mrs. Lutz and sons returned in June from a visit to the relatives and friends in the Rheinland region near Cologne, Germany. Henry is employed at the Ford River Rouge plant, and Ted is at the Precision Tool and Manufacturing Company, Orchard Lake Road.

John Lutz, another brother of Mrs. Foster, is owner and manager of the Precision Tool Company. Mr. and Mrs. Lutz and three daughters, Edna June, Sally Jean and Evelyn Nancy reside in Rosedale Park.

"TOE SOCIAL" SUCCESSFUL
Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Nacker opened their home to an old-fashioned "toe social" for the members of the Salem Evangelical church. The social was a success financially as well as socially. The host and hostess were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Salow and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Gildemeister.

You Can Depend on the Man Who ADVERTISES

Nine times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. He can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only... but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good-will.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.

I'm Glad I Did It!"

Surely, I might have kept my old fashioned range. I might have put up with all the bother of its many inconveniences. I might even have kept my eyes closed to its out-of-date unattractiveness. But... I didn't. I had read about these new modern gas ranges.

I took advantage of the free trial plan and, without any cost to me, either for rental or installation, I gave it every conceivable test in my own kitchen. I was so impressed with its many advantages, with its positive economy, with its outstanding beauty, that I couldn't resist buying it, especially after I compared notes with some of my friends who have other so-called modern cooking methods.

It actually costs less than 10c a day, and I am paying for it along with my regular gas bill. That's why I repeat... "I'm glad I did it." And, I'd suggest that you, too, call at or phone the Consumers Power Co. There's no reason in the world why your cooking duties can't be made as pleasant and worry-free as mine are.
