Don't Buy Complexion, Eat It, Chemists Say

The home garden is no friend of the beauty specialist where complexion is concerned, scientists tell us, because the properly balanced diet containing vitamin and mineral fresh vegetables will give nature its chance to do what was intended, bring health to the body, and with it, a good complexion. Vegetables are not the only foods to produce such results, of course, but they are the "deficiency" type which supply the hidden food elements lacking in so many modern table delicacies. The fact that they are grown at home and can be used fresh from the garden without the less brought about by being kept out of the ground, makes them doubly valuable for the health and complexion seeker.

Swiss Chard for Summer 'Greens'

Of all garden greens, spinach and Swiss chard are most popular and easiest to grow. For the early crop, spinach cannot be beat, but it is weather puts it out of business, and chard must take its place.

Chard is one of the most prolific bearers of the vegetable garden. It has been rightly named "cut and come again," and will continue producing crisp, tasty leaves throughout most of the summer, if cut near the ground and roots are left undisturbed.

It is an excellent follow-up crop for an early vegetable, such as radishes or peas, although it may also be planted early. Being a relative of the beet, cultural instructions are very similar, the difference between the two is that the chard spends its efforts in creating leaves instead of roots.

Plant seed sparingly in rows and thin to 2 inches apart. When leaves reach considerable size, thin again to 6 inches apart. Cut most mature leaves as needed for the table. Chard benefits from fast growth; this means plenty of moisture, good cultivation and sufficient plant food.

Although it is usually grown for the "greens" only, the midribs and stems are deliciously edible if cooked in the manner of asparagus and served in cream sauce or butter. They have a delicate flavor, peculiarly their own. Do not overcook chard.

14 To Receive Diplomas For Hospital Work

Not the least worthy of the many hundreds of young people who will be graduated from Michigan schools this spring are the 14 students who will receive their diplomas on the basis of work done in the school at the University of Michigan Hospital at Ann Arbor.

A part of the Hospital's social service program which was begun some 25 years ago, the school has played an important part in the job of relieving the psychological strains incident to long hospitalizations. In addition, of course, it provides a medium through which the boy or girl can keep up at least a part of the time which he spends in the Hospital. The most important function which the school fulfills, however, is in the prevention of normal experience in an abnormal environment.

While some voluntary teaching had been done in the Hospital before, professional teaching service was not made available until 1922 when the King's Daughters provided a teacher for the work. Since that time the Hospital School has developed along the lines of patients' needs and now includes instruction in all grades, high school commercial work, and adult education. Over 45,000 children have received instruction in the Hospital School since 1922. Many received promotion while others maintained or improved their work on return to their schools.

Fourth Grade Poetry

(Editor's Note—This week the Enterprise takes pleasure in printing four more poems written by Farmington fourth grade pupils. The last three of the ten poems given to the Enterprise will be published next week.)

BIG "IG"

Once there was a little pig. Who grew and grew and grew so big. Said a little dog to big pig. "Why are you so awful big?" "I don't think I'm so big," said big pig. "But you're an awful size," said dog. Big pig said, "If I am, then I'm a hog."

—Cleve Holmes

I LIVE RIGHT

Now I'm young and not so wise. I don't live on ice cream and pies. I eat peas and spinach and such. Because I like them very much. I'll be a life-saver when I grow up. Or else I'll be a baseball player and win the cup. —Bob Miller.

FRIENDS

Mrs. Cat and Mr. Cat sat by the road. Along came their friend, old Mr. Toad. They talked and they talked about how nice it would be to dine. Just then Mr. Toad saw a mouse. They all cried, "That's mine!" That's mine!

—Mary Ann Isley.

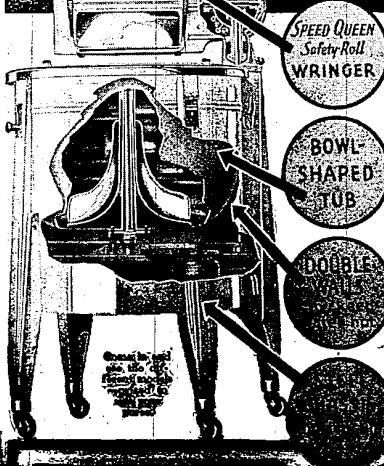

THE SICK GIRL

One day I got terribly sick. Up came my dinner with a kick. My teacher said, "You better go to bed." But I said, "No, I want to stay in school instead." Then at recess I went out to play. And I was better all the day.

—Margaret Brown.

SPEED QUEEN

-is the only washer that offers all these fine FEATURES

Offers exclusive features found on no other wringer. When the safety bar is pressed, three things happen: (1) pressure is released, (2) both rolls stop instantly, (3) power is automatically disengaged. To reengage all three, merely push down top.

No other washer has a tub like the Speed Queen. Its smoothly rounded, curved bottom design employs same principle as a sliding bowl. The result is maximum water action with no "dead corner pockets."

Your dirtiest garments come at the end of your wash. If the water cools off, it's almost impossible to get them clean. The Speed-Queen has double walls which insulate the tub and keep the water steaming hot from the first batch to the last.

The only washer that has a steel chassis. This steel chassis makes the Speed Queen a permanent addition to your home. Nothing else will last for so long, and it's guaranteed for the full life of the tub.

You Can Depend on the Man Who ADVERTISES

Nine times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only... but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good-will.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.
