WHEN COLD IS KING

MEALS need to be crisp, cool and succulent to tempt warm weather appetites; and ice-shaved, cracked, or in taste-free, crystal-clear cubes—comes into its own as first aid to summer menus.

For a veritable flower-garden dish, surround fruit cup or tomato juice cocktail with shaved ice, tinted pale green. To that the ice, pour a drop or two of vegetable coloring over it and mix lightly to blend the color.

For an attractive and refreshing cocktail accompaniment, serve celery curls, raw carrot sticks and huge ripe olives in a bowl of cracked ice.

Keats and Shelley. His finesse of rhyme and meter may not please hole themselves into the rules poetry students must learn, but he illustrates a dramatic scene of climax in his one contribution, "The Monkey" and a philosophical attitude in his poem, "My Early Life".

Little Martin handed his vacation poetry efforts to the editor the other day, and they are printed below:

THE MONKEY

One day I went to the Zoo,
The teacher and other children went too,
I went to the cage to watch a monkey eat,
It wasn't polite, that was a fact,
It opened its mouth and smiled at me,
But O Gee! it spat on me.

MY EARLY LIFE

Now I'm in my early life,
I'm not going to have a wife,
I'm not going to get in love,
But be a baseball player and wear a glove,
I'm not going to have a wife,
But enjoy my early days of life.

You Can Depend on the Man Who ADVERTISES

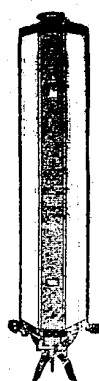

Nine times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only . . . but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good-will.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.
