Road Problems Are Discussed

The problem of separating traffic on heavily-traveled Michigan highways was attacked on two separate occasions last week.

Murray D. Van Wageningen, state highway commissioner, met with the Highway Advisory Board in New York City largely for the purpose of inspecting limited-way highways in the metropolitan area. In this construction, interferences are eliminated by grade separations and traffic is divided by a strip of land. Indications were that divided highway construction will receive more emphasis in long-range planning for the future.

A quest for an artificial divider for 4-lane pavements set the nation's No. 1 traffic expert—Dr. Miller McClintock, of Yale University Bureau of Street Traffic Research—into Michigan on an experimental mission.

Dr. McClintock supervised tests of two types of metal traffic deflectors, which he designed, on an abandoned section of "U.S. 1" near Webberville all last week. The test General Motors Proving Ground runs were made by drivers from Dr. McClintock said further tests are needed before such devices can be used effectively on ordinary sections of 4-lane pavement. He said they could be used, however, for special conditions such as those at grade separations and bridges.

The Highway Advisory Board also looked over 46 trucking changes involving 125 miles of highway along with proposals to have Muskegon the western terminus of U.S. 1 in Michigan rather than Grand Haven and to have U.S. 2 between Iron Mountain and Crystal Falls routed through Michigan rather than Wisconsin.

At The Redford Theatre

A motion picture which is being heralded as something out of the ordinary in film entertainment is scheduled for the Redford Theatre Friday through Monday with the showing of "Port of Seven Seas" starring Wallace Beery with a company of distinguished supporting players including Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal and Jessie Ralph.

Beery is said to play one of his most unusual roles in the new drama in which he deviates from such outdoor characterizations as his "Bad Man of Brimstone" and "Viva Villa" to enact the part of the owner of a bar on the Marcellus waterfront. It is a part reminiscent of his former work with the beloved Marie Dressler. The new picture is based on Marcel Pagnol's play, "Fanny," one of Europe's greatest stage successes, with screen play by Preston Sturges and direction by James Whale. The story deals with the lives of Cesar, rough but warm-hearted owner of the waterfront cafe, his son Marius who dreams of sailing to faraway places, Madelon, who loves Marius enough to let him go away, and Pantse, wealthy sail-maker, who tries to compensate her for her loss.

This last role is played by Frank Morgan, who makes a startling about-face from his familiar comedy portraits to play one of his rare serious parts. Madelon is enacted by Maureen O'Sullivan, her first work since her successful appearance opposite Robert Taylor in "A Yank at Oxford." The part of the dreamer, Marius, is filled by John Beal, the versatile young actor who switched from the grippingly dramatic part of the son in "Madame X" to the hilarious suture in "Double Wedding."

Filming of the picture entailed one of the most ambitious set construction projects attempted in some time, the sets covering more than six acres and including a replica of the famous quay in Marseilles, portions of the picturesque city itself, construction of boats and steamers, the marine bar and a hundred and one other details which bring to life scenes of the colorful French port. The set is described as being one of the largest constructed since the filming of "A Tale of Two Cities."

Simone Simon will be featured in "Josette" in the second portion of the feature for the four days.

Playing Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday will be Melvyn Douglas and Florence Rice in "The Company" and "Young Fugitives" starring Dorothy Kent and Robert Wilcox.

Col. Eaton Endorses Mrs. Therese A. Lee

(Political Advertisement)

Elton R. Eaton, state representative from Plymouth and publisher of the Plymouth Mail, in an editorial recently published in his paper is strongly in favor of electing more women to legislative posts. When he was last in Royal Oak he stated that this section of the country was especially well favored in having available a woman like Mrs. Therese A. Lee to send to the legislature.

"Mrs. Lee, widow of the late State Representative Melvin H. Lee," said Col. Eaton, "is a woman that will not only bring leadership and honesty to the post, but she has the experience, garnered through her close contact with the work during Representative Lee's terms in office that give her and through her, the district she represents, distinct advantages."

The following is Eaton's editorial:

"HONESTY IS THE GREATEST NEED"

"There have been one or two critics who have expressed themselves as somewhat upset over a suggestion made in The Plymouth Mail a few days ago that maybe there might be an improvement in legislative circles, both state and national, if some honest-to-God women leaders were elected to some of these jobs. Maybe if some of these critics knew just how bad legislative conditions are they would be willing to agree to any idea that might result in an improvement. The editor of The Mail is not at all concerned over the personnel, just so it is possessed of brains, leadership, and above all, HONESTY. A few weeks ago in close contact with legislative halls will convince the most skeptical that at this time he arrived for a whole lot of HONESTY in connection with legislative matters. The leadership we have in mind is the outstanding kind, not the self-assumed advertising brand.

"I will refer to one of these 'doubting Thomases' to Paul Mallon's Washington letter published recently in the Detroit Times, in which he points out clearly the intelligent leadership of a woman legislator in the nation's capital! The writer has never known a dishonest leader among feminine groups. They seem to have an interest in public affairs because of the public good and not because of an expectation of financial reward or other emoluments that might be derived from public service. A dozen or two of these outstanding leaders could and would without question do a real clean-up on the legislative scene. No critics, it is not the name that counts so much, it is the LEADERSHIP plus the names of some of these women that Michigan needs the most and that the republican party need so badly these days."

Therese A. Lee is an educated business woman who is carrying on the Melvin H. Lee General Insurance and Bond Business. Everyone in this district knows well that the late Representative Lee was known as a man who did things. Mrs. Lee worked with him side by side in both the business and his legislative work. This has taught her how to get things done.

Her wide acquaintance with members of the Legislature and department heads will be invaluable to a new member. Because of this wide knowledge and her knowledge of legislative procedure she is more than qualified to represent the people of this district.

These A. Lee is interested in the furthering of: Better Education and further appropriations for school districts; Child Welfare; Widows Pensions; Old Age Pensions; Fair Dealing; and the Revision of Tax Laws to permit Exemption of Taxes on homesteads, such as now in force in Florida.

She is well acquainted with the problems and needs of this district and has been a resident of Royal Oak for the past fourteen years.

A vote for Therese A. Lee is a vote for honest and progressive government.

CHILDREN'S BUREAU CHIEF TO SPEAK AT CONVENTION

Katharine F. Lenroot, of Washington, D. C., Chief of the Children's Bureau, will be guest speaker at the Michigan State Medical Society Convention in Detroit, September 20, 21, 22, 1933. Miss Lenroot will speak on Thursday morning, September 22, at 11:30 a. m. in the Book-Cadillac Hotel. Her subject will be "Federal and State Cooperation in Maternal and Child Health Service."

All forty-eight states are cooperating with the Children's Bureau, through their State Departments of Health, in the extension and improvement of maternal and child health services, in diagnostic treatment and also in aftercare services for crippled children.

"Under the Federal aid program, authorized by the Social Security Act, the official state agencies, in consultation with representatives of the medical profession and other interested groups, are bringing to mothers and children, especially in rural areas and small cities, expert advice and public health nursing, nutrition, dental health, school health, immunization and health education service."

"Likewise, state agencies responsible for services for the restoration of crippled children to useful lives are aided to develop a program in which state attention is given to the physical and social problems with which these children are confronted. Experience in Michigan under the crippled and afflicted children's acts affords an unusually broad field for analysis and demonstration of how public services for the medical care of children can best be organized."

A total of fifty-two speakers of national renown in the field of medicine and surgery will appear on the Scientific Program of the Michigan State Medical Society during the three-day convention. It is anticipated that two thousand physicians of Michigan, their wives and families, will convene in Detroit for the Seventy-Third Annual Convention of their association.
