"Mind" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 19.

The Golden Text (I Peter 3:8) is: "Be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Romans 11:32, 34): "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord or who hath been his counsellor?"

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following: "There can be but one Mind, because there is but one God; and if mortals claimed no other Mind and accepted no other, sin would be unknown. We can have but one Mind, if that one is infinite."

More Care Needed In Security Applications
Confusion still exists among many workers who apply for social security numbers, according to Walter B. Redman, manager of the Pontiac office of this Federal agency.

"Employees could save time for themselves, their employers, and our office staff if they would be more careful in filling out their applications for account numbers," Mr. Redman suggested.
The total of 1253 applications for original account numbers received by the Pontiac office during the last three months, 414 of the applications received by mail had to be returned for corrections. The most frequent errors he listed in three groups: Ages not in agreement with dates of births; initials given instead of full names; and married names of mothers listed instead of the maiden names. During the last 9 months, corrections and name changes were handled by the office here.

Milt Lectins Philosophy

"HELLO, MIL," says Whit Whitaker, dropping the sugar into the sugar barrel and placing the paper bag of sugar on the counter. His firm, blunt fingers folded in the top of the bag with swiftness, "What's on your mind that makes you look sadder a seltzer pup? Thought you were going on your vacation."

Milt Bramwell nodded dolorously. "I never will file vacation," he conceded. "I can always have a better time just stayin' around home, leavin' the kids do the chores, and goin' fishin' every day for a week. That way, comin' home to a good supper every night, a man gits a good deal out of it."

"The maximum of enjoyment for the minimum effort, as our friend, the judge, would say," remarked Whitaker. His thought shifted to Milt's thin, tired, busy wife, who daily put across a round of work that would tax many a man. "Does Milt Bramwell take a week off, too?"

"That's just it," said Milt. "She says it's no more than fair that she and the children should have a holiday, too. There's no accounting for women. She wants to go down East, visitin' her brother's folks. Jim Hartley's her brother. And so I s'pose we'll go. 'Tain't bad fishin' country, and her folks have got a fine farm, and a flivver. Might be a chance, but I ain't anticipatin' much."

"Like the rest of us Yankees, you hope for the best while expectin' the worst," said Whit, pushing the bag of sugar across the counter to young Clayt Andrews.

As Milt wandered out, Clayt commented laughingly: "Milt Bramwell must have done some talkin'. Seldom that Milt allows anyone to interfere with his personal enjoyment. He's a very consistent citizen."

"They do say," said Whit absently, "that a bucket a pizen kint in a pot of beans gives it the same flavor all the way through."

"Meanin' that Milt's passion for ease kind of colors his whole life, like a red stocking in a lot of white clothes," grinned Clayt. "I know Jim Hartley. Good fellow. Wish someone would put a flea in his ear."

"Sho, now," said the stereotyper gravely. "That ought to be easy. I've heard tell the sand fleas are mighty thick on the shores of those ponds over to the Falls."

Followed two weeks of the best fishing weather, when the men who gathered at the store to do the family buying, get the mail, and, incidentally, to exchange yarns and bits of news, speculated much as to Milt's enjoyment of the family vacation. Yet, when Milt reappeared in their midst, he was greeted casually.

"Kind of vacation did you have, Milt? You look as if your constitution was considerable undermined."

"Well, sir, it's a relief to git home," said Milt, instantly responsive. "First off, locked as if I might git a pretty good time, fishin', while the women was visitin'."

"The first day I started out with plenty of lunch in my basket. My wife's brother, he was too busy to go with me, but he directed me where to go—drawed me a little map—an' I had a good day's fishin'. Great sport. Next day he let me have the car, and I went further. All that work was pretty good. Best vacation there is—comin' home to a good supper after a good day's sport. But when I got home that first Sat'day night, I found Jim had dropped a rock on his foot while he was mendin' the stone wall. Rest of the time I spent hangin' round the house doin' chores—milkin', choppin' wood, and such like. Wife er knew her to talk so much. It was a long week. He was still pretty lame when I left. I didn't tumble even when he said 'Good-by, Milt, I've enjoyed your vacation a lot.' But just as we topped a little rise a short piece from the house, I heard someone clikin' the milk pails. I looked back and see Jim walk across the yard spy as a cat."

"What you need, Milt," said Whit, "is to learn to be a philosopher."

"Expect so," said Milt, ambulating out.

"Been over to the Falls lately, Clayt?" inquired Whit, fixing young Andrews with a keen, blue eye.

"Why?" inquired the boy, innocently. "I was there last Sat'ner."

"Heard there was a scarcity of sand fleas on the lake shore since then," returned Whit gravely.

Clayt turned scarlet and met the older man's look a trifle sheepishly. "I only took one to do the trick," he admitted. "But he was a real lively and accommodatin' flea, and took a sight of satisfaction in his work."

TON OF FERTILIZER PER FARM IS U. S. AVERAGE

CHICAGO—Use of chemical fertilizer in the United States has increased 400 per cent in the past fifty years, yet the consumption today averages slightly more than a ton per farm for the entire country, a report of the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee says.

This Ohio farmer believes in fertilizer. Crop in his left hand was fertilized. The one in his right was not.

"In 1888 American farms used in addition to manure about 1,800,000 tons of commercial fertilizer," the report sets forth. "In 1938 the consumption of fertilizer was estimated at 7,200,000 tons, or about one and one-tenth tons per farm."
"Fifty years ago the average ton of mixed fertilizer contained only 13.8 per cent of plant food, as against 18.5 per cent. Thus the average retail price of a unit of plant food was nearly 50 per cent lower in 1938 than it was in 1888."

Panama Shaped Like Caterpillar
Panama is shaped like a crawling caterpillar, with its head touching Costa Rica on the north, and its tail reaching southward to the forested mountains of Colombia, being equal in area to Maine.
Panama City is the Pacific side of the canal. The bay there is a fisherman's paradise. "Panama," in the native Indian tongue, means "abundant fish."
The old city of Panama is the highest town on the mainland of America.

Red Cross Nurses Aid Million Sick

Red Cross public health nurses made more than one million visits to or on behalf of the sick during the fiscal year 1937-38.

The patients live in mountain communities, on islands off the coast, in isolated swamp regions, and in crowded industrial sections. During the same period the nurses inspected 559,157 school children for health defects in cooperation with local physicians, and gave instructions in home hygiene and care of the sick to 58,751 mothers and young girls.
