Before she could leave, however, word came of the composer's death. The Fair turned to other sources but without satisfactory results.
Then one day Miss Swit and Ira Gershwin dhe tos good sources brother, came upon an unnamed chorus ful the follo of Gershwin's unpublished the folio of ceralwin's unpublished works. They tried it out; and were winks. They tried it out; and were minediately impressed, 1941 officials were equally drawn to the music and agreed with Miss Swift. That the song was the jvery one; that the song was the jvery one all along and might easily have been the one Gersiwin's brother was asked to write the jricks, and now we have the "Dawn of a New Day." for all the world to hear, while the 1939 New York World's Fair millions "preclaim lier story—orange, blue and white beside Old Glory."
