Coeds Not as Good Talkers as Mothers

So College Faculty Holds Little 'Gab Fests.'

COLUMBIA, MO.—The modern college girl, unlike her mother, has a difficult time when it comes to gossiping, according to a survey conducted at Stephens College for Women.

consiping, according to a survey conducted at Stephens College for Women.

The survey, participated in by more than $90 freshman students, revealed that most college girls have speech defects or are backward when it comes to talking. As a result "gab fests" have been organized at the college dornitories to the girls can improve their speech.

The survey, conducted by Dr. Wesley A. Wiksell, professor of speech, showed that nearly 40 per cent of the girls suffered from not the college dornitories of the college dornitories of the college dornitories. Almost an equal number showed a lack of composure and a tendency to be girls of the college dornitories of the college of the clear language.

The survey is conducted at the college every year with an idea of eliminating speech defects.

"Our object is not to make public speakers," Dr. Wiksell said, "but to make the everyday human communications easier and more pleas-munications easier and into a part of the man of the most troublesome of defects of method the most result of the man of
