Money, Money, Money!
(Christian Science Monitor)
A Brazilian dancer has arrived to tour the United States. In New York, on twenty words, the dancer who revealed the ship reports, over with her new vocabulary, starting with, "I say money, money, money," and running through "I say yes, no, hot, hot, turkey sandwich, grape juice and okay" back to "Money, money, money."
Now it may be possible to get a great deal out of the United States with substantially that list of words. But the attorney rather suggests the way many persons are trying to get through life. We all have need of a mental vocabulary of interests broader than any one object, be it money, fame, position, pleasure or ease. It is true that money seems to command all of material services that others can do for us; but there are some things we must do for ourselves and there are lots of interesting ideas in the language beyond "money, money, money."

Cashing In On Crime
(Exchange)
A Broadway columnist reports that James J. Hines, former Tammany chieftain, now under prison sentence, has been deluged with attractive offers—some said to be around $125,000—from publishers and movie producers for the story of his life.
This is hardly a phenomenon in America. Countless notorious people: murderers, swindlers, gangsters, and those guilty of corruption in high places have sold their life stories for tidy sums. It is fairly common for the "death-house story" of some condemned person to be blazoned across the pages of the sensational press.
The only possible excuse for such a thing is that it may provide funds for those unfortunate who have, through no fault of their own, been drawn within the web of crime and made to suffer for the thoughtlessness of another. But even this would not seem to justify the glorification of crime and criminals which results from the publication of such stories. If the public realized that it, in the final analysis, pays in various ways the fancy prices that some of these offenders receive for their stories, it might not be so anxious to read of their careers.

Love is a Wonderful Thing
(Christian Science Monitor)
If only because it is pleasant sometimes to read of other matters besides war and worry, these two items seem refreshing enough to be recorded here.
At Havre, France, the other day, Frank Jenkins and Helen Proctor were married. They had met ten years before in Canada, and then had exchanged 7,250 love letters. Frank wrote 3,650 and Helen the rest.
The New York World's Fair there is a building where visitors are allowed to peek away at typewriters. In one of the machines, an unnamed lover left this touching note: "Dearest Daisy—I forgot to tell you what a rotten stinker I think you are."
How wonderful is love! How constant and persistent it can be—and how bitter. Eh Helen? Eh Daisy?

Towers
(Exchange)
From the beginning of time mankind has tried to build as far up toward the sky as he could. Primitive men built in the tops of trees to protect themselves from prowling enemies on the ground. The Bible tells of the effort to build a great tower at Babel, which never was finished.
Two recent news items reminded me of modern efforts at tower building. It is just over 50 years since the tallest structure ever built by man up to then was finished. That is the Eiffel Tower 981 feet high, built as a show piece for the Paris World's Fair, and still standing, the dominant figure of the Paris landscape. Only two higher buildings have ever been built, the Empire State Building, 1,248 feet high, and the Chrysler Building, 1,055 feet, both in New York.
New York learned to build high, steel-framed structures from Chicago. For years the Chicago Masonic Temple, a dome-topped skyscraper, 302 feet high, was the tallest building in the world. Only the Washington Monument, 555 feet, and the Eiffel Tower, neither of them really "buildings", surpassed it. But now, the papers say, that pioneer of high steel buildings is being torn down.

Mystery
(Treaton Times)
The most fascinating mystery in American history is what became of the colony of Englishmen which Sir Walter Raleigh planted on Roanoke Island, on the coast of North Carolina, in 1585. Here was born the first white child in what is now the United States, Virginia Dare. But when an expedition with supplies for the colony reached Roanoke a year later, no living person could be found.
Many legends have entered around the lost colony, the most credible being that they joined a tribe of friendly Indians on the mainland and intermarried with them. Gray-eyed Indians were still found around Cape Hatteras two hundred years later.
Just the other day a storm swept

Incident
(Exchange)
"Incidents" are not causes of war. They are excuses for it. The gravity with which reports of a slaying of a Danziger by a Pole are received in world capitals is the result of the background of the occurrence. Today it is known that the shot at Sarajevo, even though it was fired at an archduke, was almost as nothing compared with the possibilities for war which had been allowed to accumulate on every hand.
It is the use to which political rivals put such incidents that makes them dangerous to millions who have only the most discreet interest in them. True, the incident usually grows out of the situation and therefore cannot be entirely separated from it. The incident is a gauge of tension. But for that very reason it should not be magnified, if peace is sought.

"God the Preserver of Man" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, June 11.
The Golden Text (Psalm 36:1) is: "Thy righteousness is like the great mountains; thy judgments are a great deep: O Lord, thou preservest man and beast."
Among the Bible citations is this passage (Isaiah 41:10): "Fear thou not; for I am with thee; be not dismayed; for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness."
Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 353): "Rise in the strength of Spirit to resist all that is untrue good. God has made man capable of this, and nothing can vitiate the ability and power divinely bequeathed on man."
