Michigan Bell Advances Property Tax Payment
 The state's fiscal emergency this week spurred the Michigan Bell Telephone Company to advance its semi-annual state property tax payment fifteen days.
 Frank L. Hall, tax attorney for the company, turned over to Auditor-General Vernon J. Brown a check for $1,520,246.77, representing half the $3,040,493.54 the Michigan Bell will pay to the state in property taxes for 1938. The first payment, which is due by June 30, was advanced upon a recent suggestion to the Company by the State Tax Commission of a probable state financial emergency before July 1. Final payment on the property tax bill is due on or before October 31.

By L. L. STEVENSON
 This and That: The street cleaning department seems to have as just taken its cue from the Broadway scene . . . Along the main stem, steamrolled rubbish trucks parade with this legend prominently displayed: "Department of Sanitation — Broadway Night Squad."
 Down on Stanton street, on the lower East Side, is a pushcart that sells caviar . . . Apparently Rudy Vallee's vaunted powers as a star-maker didn't work with "Rags" Ragland, a comedian featured on some of his broadcasts . . . "Rags" is back working in what is used to be the old crooked street in town . . . The carousel in Central park is 60 years old . . . and many kids can't find it because the sign read "carousal" instead of "mercy-go-round" . . .

The house on Park avenue on the northeast corner of Thirty-ninth street has number . . . One that was listed as 1 Park avenue . . . and when the number was shifted to an office building, the owner refused to accept a substitute. What has become of wooden barber poles? . . . During intermission periods at a swanky East Side night spot noted for its food, members of the band can usually be found in a third avenue hamburger joint . . . The food is different there . . . and so are the prices . . . New York has 12,343 licensed taxicabs . . . The number was fixed by an ordinance passed in 1937 limiting the total to those then licensed . . . It can be increased only after public hearings have been held . . . The measure was adopted to prevent overcrowding of the streets.

Appearance: Art Delevingne, Department Director, Holst, husky band leader at the El Morocco, looks like a football player . . . But his instrument is the delicate violin . . . Art Shubin, swing band leader at the Hotel Lincoln blue room, reads treatises on social and political economy . . . and topped his N. Y. U. class in politics . . . Phil Spink, who leads an all-girl group at the Bowmans of the Biltmore, prefers the company of his own sex, getting together twice weekly for a police session with such cronies as song writers Walter Donaldson and Joe Young and Paramount manager Bob Weitman . . . Kay Kysar, who burlesques college quizzes at the Pennsylvania Manhattan room, comes from a very literate clan . . . His father taught courses at North Carolina college . . . F. W. Walter, who acted as organizer in his father's church.

Manhattan-niter (as seen by Bea Wain): The milling crowds of sliders coming out of Grand Central terminal Sunday nights after a full day on snowy hills . . . Fire but happy, they add a picturesque touch to Forty-second street with their colorful outfits . . . The self-conscious attitude of the newly arrived vacationers from the Southland with their suntanned faces in startling contrast to pale patches of stay-at-homes . . . The sorrowful expression of the young woman who had caught by a sudden gust of wind, took to the air and ended under the wheels of a Broadway trolley.

Climb-a-ladder: Have you heard, asks Jerry Cooper, about the ball player who missed out with the millionaire's daughter . . . No hits no runs, no no-hitters . . . Overboard on Swing lane: "Joe, someone stole that expensive solid gold fask of yours?" . . . "Oh, that's all right. There was nothing of value in it." . . . Al Donahue tells about the dealer in oddities who was eager to get rid of some curiosities . . . Those of his wife, and his mother-in-law . . . and Genevieve Rowe told of a sign in a Brooklyn market: "Fish and Seafood."

Short story: At a recent private banquet in the Taft grill, one of the newly hired waiters finding insufficient coffee cups, served a guest first guest called the captain over and wanted to know what was the big idea serving him coffee in a two-handed cup. The embarrassed captain first gazed, then bowing low, replied, "You see, sir, the waiter didn't know whether you were right-handed or left-handed." And I think this is the proper place to write THE END.

ASK FARMERS' AID IN PROTECTING BLACK TOP ROADS

State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagener appealed to Michigan farmers this week for assistance in preventing damage to black top roads.
 The commissioner pointed out that field engineers had reported extensive damage to black-top roads by farm tractors with lugs on their wheels. He said that the damage was becoming a serious problem because of large additional mileage of black-top roads on the state highway system as a result of improvement programs on farm-to-market and secondary roads.
 Tractors Prohibited
 "The law prohibits the operation of tractors with lugs on highways of the state," the commissioner said. "Black top roads are most affected by this practice and farmers can do much to preserve these roads by cooperating in the observance of this law."
 The new penalties for a penalty of $100 fine or a jail sentence or both for violations. The commissioner suggested that farmers place plants on the surface when it is necessary for them to move their tractors over the highways.

Benefits From Tag Day Are Wide-Spread
 Contributions raised by St. Joseph Hospital Auxiliary's annual Tag Day are used for the benefit of large numbers of Oakland County residents annually.
 Proceeds from previous tag days have, among welfare projects of the auxiliary, made it possible for the hospital to operate the clinic for nine years, placing its services within the reach of sick men, women and children of Oakland County with no distinction as to class, creed, or race.
 The "Tag Day" under the supervision of Mrs. Emma Shoemaker and her committee, will be held in Farmington Saturday, June 23. Last year many pairs of glasses were provided for children

Sulphur Recommended For Poultry Disease

Coccidiosis, as common to chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks and guinea fowls is a serious economic problem to the poultryman as it exacts a heavy toll from his flock, at times ranging as high as 80 to 100 per cent mortality.
 It is particularly prevalent during the warm days of spring and early summer. It is then that especially care should be given to control the disease as the conditions for its spread are most favorable at this time.
 In the past, attempts have been made to control, cure and prevent the disease by various measures and all kinds of remedies and quack nostrums have been offered the poultryman. The Extension Service of the Texas A. I. M. College has found that coccidiosis can be prevented through the feeding of 5 per cent commercial fowl sulphur.
 They recommend that 5 per cent of the commercial fowl sulphur be included in the mash from the time the chicks are two weeks old until they are placed in the laying house at five to six months of age. However, it is imperative that this sulphur feeding should not begin until after the chicks are two weeks old. Also, sulphur should not be used unless the chicks have access to direct sunlight.

Michigan Potatoes Earn 15 Million Dollars

Fifteen million dollars is not a drop in the bucket of any state's income, so Michigan is learning to take pride in its potato crop, which is the most important cash crop in the state.
 In the last 10 years the annual average Wolverine crop has been worth $15,027,500. In 1938 Michigan farmers produced 30,000,000 bushels to rank second in the nation.
 Extension work of Michigan State College and experimentation by staff members in the agricultural division has played a part in developing suitable varieties, fertilizer practices, cultural methods, storage, grading and marketing systems.
 To expand this service to the state's potato growers, a new bulletin has been made available at the college. It is "Better Potatoes for Michigan." Extension Bulletin 49, prepared by H. C. Moore of the farm crops department.
