NEW TRAFFIC LAW PROVIDES 25 MILE SPEED LIMIT

(Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of ten articles, prepared by the Michigan State Police high-spotting Michigan's new traffic law which becomes effective Sept. 29. Important changes have been made in customary driving habits. Greater safety—and fewer traffic arrests—will result from a close study of these articles.)

Speed Limits

The legal speed limit under Michigan's new traffic law is 25 miles per hour in both business and residential districts. It was formerly 15 miles per hour in business districts and 20 miles per hour in the residential districts.

Local authorities may establish higher speed limits in either business or residential districts. In no case may such limits be less than 25 miles per hour.

All highways on which the limit is set in excess of 25 miles an hour must be designated as through highways and adequate signs posted informing the motorist of the permissable speed. Entrances to such highways, the Michigan State Police point out, must be posted with stop signs.

May Increase Limit

Within cities and villages the state highway commissioner may increase speed limits on state highways outside of business districts, adequate signs will inform the motorists of such limits in excess of 25 miles per hour.

Signs are not necessary in business or residential districts except where the limit is in excess of 25 miles per hour. Motorists driving on unmarked streets in either business or residential districts are subject to the 25 mile per hour limitation.

On the open road outside the limits of cities and villages, a safe and prudent speed is lawful. The new law, however, in case of vehicles towing other vehicles or trailers, set a definite speed limit of 50 miles per hour. This applies especially to house trailers.

Speed regulations of this act are based on recommendations of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, and puts Michigan in step with other states in a uniform traffic code.

CALL OF THE COUNTRY

Ye pent-up toilers, seeking rest,
Ye bookworms, bent on ceaseless quest,
Ye money-changers, selling souls,
Ye clerks who sweat in cubby-holes,
Ye men who bend the stubborn steel
And shape the wood and guide the wheel,
And all who slave in city cell
For crusts of bread and rinds of meat,
Mid foulsome air and dust and heat—
Come out where joy and freedom dwell!

The country calls you to be free—
To revel in her liberty;
To see the beauty of the hills;
To hear the music of the rills;
To know the rapture, full and strong,
That comes from listening to a song
Trilled by a bird. No more would he
Who once, at dawn, has heard the trill
Of birds upon his window-sill,
Fare of the city's poverty!

Come, learn the lesson of the tone,
That tells its tale from zone to zone;
Come, hear the message of the breeze,
Or catch the whisper of the trees,
Or from the texture of the flower
Learn of creations magic power.
And when the Day sets golden bars
Across the west, go forth and see
Night's coming with her minstrelsy,—
Then read the secrets of the stars.

GARDEN CLUBS TO HOLD CONFERENCE AT LUDINGTON

Preparations are under way for the sixth annual state conservation conference for women which is scheduled to be held in Ludington, September 26 and 27.

Approximately 250 women from all sections of the state are expected to attend. The event is sponsored by the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan, with the aid of the Michigan department of conservation.

Nationally-known conservation authorities are on the program of speakers, for discussion of Michigan outdoor problems. Presenting graphically the need of further conservation development will be motion pictures and colored slides that will be shown.

Conference headquarters, in line with the group's practice, will be located near the state park north of Ludington. The 1938 conference was held at Jackson, with Walter J. Hayes state park a nearby attraction.

Will Take Tours

Tours of the Ludington park site will be conducted by guides. Choice of several nature hike itineraries will be offered, there being 20 miles of foot trails developed throughout the park. These lead through typical sand dunes and forest scenery, with a variety of items of historical interest enroute.

Conferences in past years have attracted representatives from the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs, Business and Professional Women's Association, Daughters of the American Revolution, state branch of the National Farm and Garden Association and the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan.

Officers in charge of arrangements include Mrs. Clarence W. Avery, Detroit, president of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan; Mrs. F. A. Votey, conservation chairman for the garden club group; Miss Clara Limbert, first vice-president of the garden clubs, and Mrs. Audrey DeWitt of the conservation department.

Mule Is Rated as Most Valuable Farm Animal

WASHINGTON.—The mule seems to be winning its fight for existence in the United States, but the horse is not doing so well.

A government survey shows there were 4,382,000 mules in the country in 1938. This was a reduction of 1 per cent from 1937 but the number of mules foaled in 1938, while smaller than the number of deaths of old mules, was the largest in 10 years. Officials found mules in every state, though too few in New England to be included in the figures. More than 80 per cent of the total was found in the South.

The survey showed 10,800,000 work-horses in the country, some in each state but more than 55 per cent in the North Central states. The total was 3 per cent less than in 1937, with the number of horses foaled in 1938 the smallest in six years. The work-horse total has declined about 50 per cent in the last 20 years.

The federal specialists rate the mule as the most valued of farm animals, giving it a national average of $118, as contrasted with $84 for the horse and $56 for the cow.

Herb Specialist Makes Hamburger Kingly Dish

CLEVELAND.—By the addition of the proper herbs, hamburger can be raised to the gastric level of filet mignon, according to Miss Daisy Healey.

Miss Healey's hobby is collecting and experimenting with herbs. She raises them, too, and has created some new ones through experiments with combinations.

"I decided to have an herb laboratory after visiting an herb garden at Mount St. Albans, Wash.," she said.

"In my herbarium are thyme and marjorum, which, with a bit of mystic mace, give a roast of beef or hamburger just the right flavoring." Miss Healey said her other aromatic plants include tarragon, linden, lavender, and bay laurel.

Name Collector Finds New Ones for Babies

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—W. E. Richardson is a collector of one of the most common things in the world, but probably no other person has a hobby similar to his. He collects names, the odd, the unusual, the different.

Feminine names not commonly heard include Clydil, Amrial, Wilme, DeMilla, Berdeen, Lieta, Venece, Painline, Camolia, Wando, Vilta, Glennia, Balia, Nome, Showanda, Harpolicy, Dace and Suda.

Among the more unusual names given boys are Merando, Vessellus, Oralanda, Ineal, Valeda and Relyea.

The Wedge

A man who does a little more work than he's asked to do, who takes a little more care than he's expected to, who puts the small details on an equal footing with the more important ones—he's the man who is going to make a success of his job. Each little thing done better is the thin edge of the wedge into something better.—London Rotarian.

Copies of New Highway Sign Book Mailed

An initial step in the uniform marking of all Michigan highways was taken recently when State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner mailed copies of the new sign manual to county and municipal traffic authorities.

The manual was drawn in accordance with an act of the 1937 legislature. It prescribes the size, shape, coloring and lettering for signs and traffic control devices. It also demonstrates just how they shall be placed upon the highways.

The first highway to be completely resigned in accordance with the new manual will be US-112 from Detroit to New Buffalo. All signs made for the department in the future will be produced under prescribed specifications and replacements of signs not conforming to the new regulations will be made gradually.

Then there is the man who invented a glass eight ball for people who like to look ahead.
