CONSUMERS POWER CO. TO HONOR FAMOUS LAWYER

JOHN C. WEADOCK

Bay City will pay honor June 20 to John C. Weadock, one of three brothers who, in the pine lumbering days in the Saginaw Valley, began to establish the name Weadock as that of lawyers.

The occasion will be the dedication of Consumers Power Company's new electric generating plant, the John C. Weadock Station, at the mouth of the Saginaw River. Public dedicatory ceremonies will be held at the plant in the afternoon with Wendell L. Wilkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation and former law partner of Mr. Weadock, as principal speaker. In the evening Mr. Weadock and Mr. Wilkie will be guests of honor at the annual banquet of the Bay City Chamber of Commerce.

Immediately after the dedication, the John C. Weadock Station will be opened for public inspection, and "open house" will be held afternoon and evening Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 20-23.

Youngest of Michigan's three original Weadock lawyer-brothers, John C. studied law in the office of the eldest, Thomas A. E., in Bay City, and was admitted to the bar in 1883. The other brother, George W., was practicing in Saginaw. Several cousins of the original trio and several descendants of Thomas A. E. and George W. likewise joined the Michigan bar. In many Michigan law offices there hangs today a group picture of 18 men taken some years ago. All 18 were Weadocks and all lawyers.

Thomas A. E. was prosecuting attorney of Bay County, mayor of Bay City, member of Congress and, after transferring to Detroit, a justice of the Michigan Supreme Court. George W. was mayor of Saginaw from 1899 to 1895. John C. was interested in politics and managed Thomas A. E.'s campaigns for Congress. He declined, however, to become a candidate for any public office, and held only the appointive post of city attorney of Bay City, from 1887 to 1891.

There is as much difference between genuine patience and sullen endurance, as between the smile of love and the malicious grashing of the teeth.
