Rural Mail Box Week To Be Observed

"Rural Mail Box Improvement Week," a week in which all owners of rural mail boxes will be urged to put their mail boxes in top shape, will be observed throughout the Farmington area from August 1 through August 8. It was announced this week by Norman Lee, postmaster.

"Unhappily rural mail boxes detract from the natural scenic beauty along highways and are not a credit to the owners of attractive homes served through the boxes," stated Mr. Lee. "Rural mail boxes which are not properly erected or which are not in good serviceable condition retard the delivery of mail and expose it to damage from the elements."

Boxes Should Be Neat

It is the desire of the Post Office Department, said Mr. Lee, to encourage patrons of the rural delivery service to provide entirely suitable mail receptacles and to erect them in such a manner that they will be accessible to the carrier and present a neat appearance. It is especially desirable that the boxes be maintained in such condition that they will properly protect the mail, that the names of box owners be inscribed on the side of the boxes, and that they be approached, them, and that the boxes and their supports be kept painted.

Patrons who have non-approved boxes of top-opening, revolving-door, or other type are not required to discard them, Lee said, provided they have been in use by the present owners for several years and are maintained in good serviceable condition.

Should Protect Mail

However, any boxes not of the present standard type which are of such design that they cannot be properly served by the carrier from his vehicle or which are not in such condition that they will protect mail from damage by the elements should be replaced with boxes of approved type. Boxes, regardless of type, should, of course, be well designed and in such condition that there will be no likelihood of the carrier injuring his hands when serving them.

City May Repair Old Fire Hall for Use by Public

Plans to alter and repair the large room above the Farmington fire department for use as a community hall are being discussed by various groups throughout the city. The possibility of turning the old quarters into a convenient meeting place for clubs and organizations in Farmington was brought to the attention of the City Commission Monday evening in a letter from Mrs. Warren Joy. Mrs. Joy suggested that the building would make an excellent room for the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Sea Scouts at the present time are experiencing difficulty in finding a suitable place to hold their meetings.

The plan met with warm approval of the members of the Commission who voted to have the Building Commissioner investigate to determine what repairs and changes would be necessary to turn the room into a suitable meeting place.

Has Seen Public Use Some time ago a partition was put in which divided the large room into two smaller ones. At the present time the rooms are used for the storage of fire hall equipment. At one time the room was given over to use as a public hall for basketball games, dances and other activities, but these were discontinued and for several years the quarters have not seen active use.

Commission members who are familiar with the hall declare that the floor and ceiling are still in good condition and that a few repairs would put them back in excellent shape. The room is approximately 50 by 80 feet in size. It was suggested that the partition be removed and that this material be used to divide off a small space at one end of the hall to be used as a kitchen.

Motorists Avoid Grand River Avenue

The need for a Northwest Motorway of limited-access type to relieve Grand River Avenue traffic congestion already has been strikingly shown by figures gathered in the first week of the State Highway Department Grand River survey.

"Although data is only approximately thus far, it reveals that Grand River Avenue has passed its stage of efficiency and cannot handle present traffic demands," said Murray D. Van Wagoner, highway commissioner.

Detroit traffic west of Woodward Avenue has increased 32 per cent since 1936, due chiefly to residential expansion to the northwest, he said. Grand River Avenue, the principal route to the northwest, shows only an 8 per cent rise in traffic volumes.

"We find a large per cent of motorists avoiding Grand River, especially the central and downtown sections, because they can make better time by roundabout routes," said the commissioner.

"Our next traffic study will concern these drivers who would use the Grand River route. If better facilities were provided."

The 15-day Grand River traffic study will end July 23. Over 10,000 postcard questionnaires were given out to motorists during the first week, and returns were near 25 per cent.

"Eight per cent is considered a good return from such questionnaires," he added. "Evidently Detroit motorists are unusually interested in efforts to solve Grand River congestion."

The survey is directed by Leo J. Niekirk, special assignment engineer for the highway department, and looks to the development of a motorway paralleling Grand River and having no traffic lights, no pedestrians and no cross traffic.

Some 120 intersections along Grand River from downtown to Eight Mile Road were checked in the last week by 125 field workers. Surveys also are being made along Second Boulevard from Grand River to Jefferson with a view of planning a tie-in with such possible future developments as a Detroit River Drive, said the commissioner.

Motorists who may receive several postcard questionnaires from field workers during the survey are asked to fill out and mail each card, since the frequency with which they use Grand River has a bearing on the survey.
