

PENS BUILT AT MICHIGAN STATE FOR CONTEST

Final workmanship has prepared the new egg laying contest buildings on the campus at Michigan State College for the opening October 1 of the nineteenth annual competition.

All pens in the new quarters have already been assigned to breeders and poultrymen all over the United States. It is announced by C. G. Card, head of the poultry department and superintendent of the contest.

Birds will eat cafeteria style as the contest runs through its scheduled 51 weeks. New feed hoppers for the 60 competing pens have been set up in three sections. From these sections, each pen of hens will have access at all times to the contest type mash, to oats and to a mixture of corn and wheat.

For some of the birds not trained to this type of feeding, some scratch grain may be placed in the litter until the birds become accustomed to picking out their own feed, Card concludes.

The buildings have a total length of 430 feet. The central portion is of two stories 24 by 30 feet and from this two wings extend, 28 feet in width and each 200 feet long. Visitors on the campus will see the buildings on Farm Lane between the two railroad lines that cut across the college farms.

Attention to insulation should make the buildings exceptionally warm this winter, which leads Card to predict that the new contest quarters offer the best housing in the history of Michigan contests.

NO FIRES IN AUGUST

Alpena, Montmorency, and Presque Isle counties, which make up the conservation department's ninth district and in 1939 were the scene of a 30,000 acre incendiary forest fire, the worst in several years, have just completed a six-week period, including all of August, without a single fire or the loss of a single acre of forest cover.

AT THE REDFORD THEATER

In line with its policy of presenting the finest of the new crop of film entertainment, the Redford Theatre will show "All This and Heaven, Too," Warner Bros. production of the sensational success story of Rachel Field novel. Betty Davis and Charles Boyer are costars in the film, which opens on Thursday.

As one of the most important pictures on the 1940 schedule, Warner Bros. have produced "All This and Heaven, Too," on a lavish scale, sparing no efforts in making the brilliant, absorbing novel come to vibrant life on the screen. Made under the personal supervision of Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production; Hal B. Wallis, executive producer, and David Lewis, associate producer, the film was directed by Anatole Litvak, whose deft artistry in handling deeply romantic themes is well known to motion picture audiences. From the brilliant co-starring team of Miss Davis and Boyer down to the smallest character "bit," the film has been cast with minute care.

Out of Rachel Field's gripping pages comes the immortal story of a young French girl, her background shrouded in mystery, who enters the home of one of France's great noblemen, Du de Praslin, as governess to his children. How strangely the destinies of these two, the little governess and the great lord, become interwoven forms the fascinating theme of this great story. Supporting Miss Davis and Boyer is a huge featured cast which includes such names as Jeffrey Lynn, Barbara O'Neill, Virginia Weidler, Helen Westley, Walter Hampden, Henry Daniell, Harry Davenport, George Colours, Montagu Love, Janet Beecher, June Lockhart, Ann Todd, Richard Nichols, Fritz Leiber, Ian Keith and many more. Casey Robinson, who was responsible for the screen treatment of such recent Betty Davis successes as "The Old Maid" and "Dark Victory," wrote the screen play based on Miss Field's novel. A brilliant musical score by Max Steiner accompanies the dramatic action of "All This and Heaven, Too."

Also to be shown is "Sporting Blood," with Robert Young and Maureen O'Sullivan.

POLIOMYELITIS IS REPORTED IN 58 COUNTIES

Fifty-eight Michigan counties have reported cases of poliomyelitis so far in September, the State Department of Health reported this week. The September cases are 200 more than 1939, and the year's total to date is a little more than that of last year.

Polio cases reported in September are so scattered that the department is repeating its August warning for parents throughout the state to watch for early signs.

"Unless parents have been put on guard by a local outbreak, they may easily fail to realize the importance of the first signs of polio," says Dr. H. Allen Meyer, state health commissioner.

"First stage symptoms come on quickly, and a physician should be called at once. Consultation service from infantile paralysis experts is being supplied wherever needed, and physicians have available the necessary equipment for treatment of serious cases."

Dr. Meyer said that only one out of three or four cases of polio develops paralysis, but that the course of the disease cannot be predicted at the beginning stage. Prompt medical care is therefore of great importance, as soon as any symptoms are observed. The first stage symptoms include fever, nausea, irritability and stiffness of the neck, and sometimes pain and tenderness in the arms and legs.

Twenty-four counties reporting five or more cases of polio this month through September 18 are: Alger 10, Allegan 5, Barry 13, Berrien 7, Branch 9, Calhoun 8, Delta 10, Dickinson 13, Eaton 5, Gage 12, Ingham 23, Iron 10, Kalamazoo 14, Kent 43, Lapeer 31, Macomb 5, Mecosta 5, Midland 6, Muskegon 8, Ottawa 5, St. Joseph 8, Van Buren 11, Washtenaw 5, Wayne 31, for a total of 238.

UNIVERSITY WILL OPEN NEW MEN'S RESIDENCE HALL

When classes at the University of Michigan resume September 30, the recently completed east quadrangle of residence halls will begin its first semester's operation.

Housing 400 men, east quadrangle is the newest addition to the university's rapidly expanding residence hall system. West quadrangle for men having been completed last fall and Stockwell Hall for women in mid-winter.

"East Quad," as it is known to students, consists of four houses, which, although in one large building, are nevertheless separate and distinct, the only communicating link between them being the large foyer surrounding the inner court on the first floor.

Separate for each house, too, is the student government system, which is patterned much after that in the other men's dormitories on the campus.

Each house has its own president and other officers elected from its own membership. Members of each house are also elected to serve on the general council for the entire quadrangle. It will be the duty of the general council to decide matters which affect more than one house. Social affairs and rules of conduct will also be under the supervision of the student governing agencies.

Student life and staff personnel is under the supervision of Dr. Joseph E. Kallebach, chief resident adviser and instructor in political science. Physical operation, including food service and housing, is under the supervision of Miss Margaret McLaughlin, dietitian.

Three of the four houses, Prescott, Greene, and Tyler, will house undergraduates, while 95 graduate and professional students will be assigned to Hinsdale House. It is expected that most of the occupants of the undergraduate houses during the first year or two will be freshmen, but, to attain a representative and balanced mixture of all classes, students will be encouraged to return for their sophomore, junior, and senior years.

This is the time of year when wild rice is ripening in Michigan lakes and streams.

But wild rice—a favorite food of ducks—is not an abundant crop in this state, according to Farley P. Tubbs of the conservation department's game division. Apparently it finds conditions of soil and water to its liking only in scattered localities. Wild rice is native to Michigan.

Sportsmen who contemplate the planting of wild rice are advised by the conservation department to select suitable sites, water two to four feet in depth with fertile underlying soil, and to make ample provision for protecting the water plants from muskrats. Seeded areas of lake and stream bottom should be surrounded by fences of small mesh chicken wire.
