Walnuts—and Pismmons, Too

(Christian Science Monitor)

Back in the home county, about this time of year, the first frosts have come and the walnuts and hickory nuts and persimmons have been falling into the soft carpet of deep grass. "The kids will be going out this Saturday with bags and baskets," mused the man in the armchair "they ought to get plenty out on the Blue Lick Pike and down..."

The sudden whirr of a covey of quail rising out of a clump of ragweed in the stubblefield nearby causes two youngsters to jump out of their skins and set them bawling and running like mad.

"As, come on back, Shep. You're no bird dog, and I'll have to pull cockleburrs out of your tail tonight if you don't keep out of the woods!"

The elder boy whistled and the three took a path down along the branch, where yellow leaves floated on the surface of the pool. The bass had long since left deeper waters; no need to turn over rocks to catch "crowdads."

The group of black walnut trees on the bank had characteristically shed all their leaves, but nuts still clung singly and in pairs, and the ground was covered. The boys descended on their prize with a whoop.

"Get a flat rock and a little one and begin knocking those hulls off," counseled the big boy. "I'm going to carry them home, too!"

Playful rabbits led the clumsy Shep, a merry chase, a persimmon tree yielded a peck basket full of pucker fruit, the water of the swimming hole was gingerly tested with a bare toe, a bumble bee's nest was investigated—and so passed the hours till the sun's golden ball hung low.

The long trudge home was made tolerable by the anticipation of a triumphant display. But a warning voice reminded of stern duty.

"That's fine, but Henry Jones, you and Joey must spread every last one of those walnuts on the shed roof before you get a bite of supper. I won't have them cluttering up my kitchen and getting..."

Holding the Line

(Exchange)

"Is this Algonquin 00007 Oh, hello, Marjorie. This is Dot. No, I'm not calling about bride, nor tennis, nor, nor the theater. I just happened to get your number on my list by coincidence. I'm helping to defend American democracy."

Marge. Yes, by telephone. Does it sound fantastic? Any more facts than what's happened in Europe? You guess not, you say. Well, I guess not, too."

The telephone lines around New York City will be crowded with conversations that may begin something like this as soon as the "aid-for-Britain" drive, as just outlined by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, gets under way. Nearly three quarters of a million residential telephones are to be rung. The sympathies of those answering will be checked. Those favoring the Committee calls will be asked to hold themselves in readiness to write letters to their representatives, urging approval of measures to help Britain.

More than 1,400 women will busy themselves with ringing up potential "allies" of Britain. Their effort will equal one person's telephoning for nearly thirty years; that's how many phones there are in the homes of New Yorkers. Many of these women doubtless have asked themselves: "Do I want to see London wiped out by Hitler's bombs? Do I want to wake up some day and find that America is itself the last line of defense against totalitarianism? Do I want to see the United States standing alone in a Nazi-Pacifist world? But what can I do?"

And having found an answer, they are passing it on—by telephone.

The Softball Candidate

(Christian Science Monitor)

Politics has always had a certain entertaining value. But there are some people who have to be entertained to get them to take an interest in politics. That is

Walrus in Wonderland

(The time has come, the walrus said, "to move into the zoo.")

So four of them did. There must have been one in the Bronx, where the zoo is, for this is the largest herd, the papers say, ever to be exhibited in any United States zoo. The importance of the walrus arrival must be estimated from the reception committee that went to meet them at New York's City Island, where presumably all the big commiteemen stood and waited in a row. As they might. There was the director of the New York Zoological Park; the assistant director; the curator of mammals and reptiles; and the park veterinarian. But where was the carpenter? He is not mentioned in the dispatches. Nor is it stated that the members of the reception committee, having had "a pleasant talk," saw fit to celebrate by dining onysters. One can only hope the occasion was not missed.

The Senate's Tax Bill

(Exchange)

Hasty passage by the House of Representatives gave the Senate a considerable job to do in the way of straightening out kinks in the excess profits tax bill. That job now has been done in fairly workmanlike style, reflecting credit on the Senate Finance Committee under Chairman Pat Harrison, and the Senate has adopted its revision of the measure, to be sent to conference committee.

In most of the points of difference the Senate bill is definitely preferable to that of the House. He it said, however, that the House reasonably conceived that its primary duty was to get some kind of a bill along promptly in a situation where defense contracts waited amortization provisions in the legislature, and that credit for sound general outlays of the measure goes back to a subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Autumnal Arabesque

(Christian Science Monitor)

Though to inhabitants of the North Temperate Zone, Autumn calls up pictures of sere fields and browning gardens, the season, nevertheless, is not without its own flowers. True, many of the blossoms which beautified July and August have ceased to bloom. Still they are replaced by others which hitherto have escaped notice.

The geranium, after vying vainly with the rose, is now at the peak of its beauty, and portulaca, lost among so many other flowers, now displays such a wealth of color as to challenge the rainbow. Varieties which, like the modest violet, have "bloomed and blushed unseen," now command their full share of belated appreciation.

The dandelion (as to the relief of harried householders) departed but the gargantuan sunflower is much in evidence, doing its utmost to outshine even "old Sol." The zinnia adds its colorful contribution to late-blooming gardens, and dashes into Joseph's coat, while fledgling chrysanthemums send forth the first timid blooms.

Soon, of course, the trees themselves will shine like flowers. Meanwhile, Autumn gardens will keep the season bright.

Lord belong the issues from death." Among the Bible citations is the passage (James 5:15): "And the prayer of faith shall save the sick and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 1): "The prayer that reforms the sinner and heals the sick is an absolute faith that all things are possible to God—a spiritual understanding of Him, an unfeigned love."

AT THE REDFORD THEATER

Plenty of laughs, excitement and romance are in store for Redford Theater audiences when Warner Bros.' new film, "They Drive by Night," opens this Thursday. The cast includes an array of screen talent that is hard to surpass in the starring roles are George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino, and Humphrey Bogart.

George Raft plays the part of a terse fellow who just wants to be able to get along without having to tangle with anyone—and that means women. He is not successful. Humphrey Bogart, in the role of his brother, would like to be able to appreciate his home and wife—to have some time he could call his own. Raft thinks that all that talk about home life is just so much nonsense until he meets and falls in love with a waitress, played by Ann Sheridan.

Bogart craves over an embankment and loses his right arm. As a result Raft finds it necessary to ask an old friend of his, portrayed by Alan Hale, for a job. Ida Lupino, in the role of Hale's wife, becomes infatuated with Raft and is furious when he acts coldly toward her. It is said that one of the most thrilling climaxes ever to be seen on the screen occurs when she carries out a deadly plot to win Raft.

The sinister plot includes the murdering of the husband she has always loathed. Believing that the removal of this obstacle to her unrequited love will change Raft's attitude toward her, she becomes infatuated at his continued coldness toward her. In a moment of frenzy she places the blame for the murder on Raft's hapless head. From there on, the action of "They Drive by Night" moves rapidly with increasing tempo to its astounding climax.

Raoul Walsh handled the directorial reins and the famous writing team of Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay wrote the scenario. The film includes such fine performers as Roscoe Karns, Gail Page, John Littel, and Joyce Compton in the supporting cast. "They Drive by Night" was adapted for the screen from a novel by A. I. Bezzerides.

STATE COLLEGE LAMBS PROVE BIG EATERS

Michigan farmers about to begin their annual purchasing and fattening of more than 300,000 feeder lambs can find profit hints in recently completed research at Michigan State College.

Under a cafeteria system which offered shelled corn, oats, bran and linseed cake the lambs consumed 70 per cent of the linseed cake that had proved the most costly of any method employed.

Here are the summaries arrived at by George A. Brown and Leonard Blankensie of the college animal husbandry department:

1. Virtually no difference in rate of gain between handfed lambs given a full feed of grain and self-fed lambs given the same feeds.
2. Feed consumed by hand-fed lambs consisted of 54 per cent hay and 46 per cent corn, while lambs that ate the same feeds in a self-feeder consumed 56 per cent corn and 44 per cent hay.
3. With hay selling for $5 a ton, hand-feeding was most economical with corn costing from 42 to 84 cents a bushel.
4. When hay was worth $7.50 a ton, and corn 55 cents or less a bushel, self-feeding produced the cheapest gains. With hay worth $10 a ton, self-feeding produced cheaper gains when corn was worth 71 cents or less a bushel. With hay at $12.50 a ton, self-feeding was cheaper when corn was worth 85 cents or less a bushel.
5. One part linseed oil cake to seven parts shelled corn made the lambs gain more rapidly with the same feeds in a self-feeder than with the same feeds in a self-feeder.

ROADSIDE TABLES TO BE LEFT FOR FOOTBALL FANS State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagener, anticipating increased use of the department's popular roadside picnic tables by football fans, this week delayed removal of the tables until the close of the griffin season.

The commissioner said so many requests had been received that orders removing the tables from the highways would be delayed as long as possible.

Van Wagener added: "Although the tourist season is near its close, the tables have become so popular with football fans that I have instructed the maintenance division to transfer as many as possible to highways that will be traversed by a majority of persons driving to games."

Meanwhile, orders have gone out to all district engineers to determine amount of chemicals needed for ice control in anticipation of bad weather ahead.

Engineers were also requested to inspect all shoulders along trunkline highways for the purpose of erecting at once all rutted conditions resulting from the unusual wet weather experienced during the last few weeks.

By maintaining proper shoulders, especially during cold weather, it was explained one of the greatest road hazards of winter driving would be eliminated.

These two gas stations DOUBLED THEIR BUSINESS with light!

An increase in net profit of 122 PER CENT achieved solely by improved lighting. That is the startling record of Mr. John T. Rancus's gas station at Woodward and Stinson Avenues, Detroit. In this "before and after" test, made to determine whether better lighting really pays its way in dollars and cents, a careful record of costs and sales was kept. The resultant figures are actually conservative. * * * Mr. Wilson Morrison, owner of a gas station at 10600 Harper Avenue, enjoyed a similar experience. He added new reflector flood lamps, and increased lamp wattage over the grease and wash racks. Three months after the installation of improved lighting, his gross sales had jumped 146 PER CENT. He says: "Since installing modern floodlighting and reflector lamps at my gas station, I have better than doubled my business. This increase was way beyond my expectations, but I can now appreciate the value of good lighting as a means of increasing business."

Would you like to get an idea of how YOUR gas station will look when flood lighted? We will be glad to demonstrate. No charge or obligation. The equipment can be set up right on your premises. Phone your Detroit Edison office.
