The Blue And White

Since Journalism is only a one-year course and the members of the fall class have had no experience in collecting and writing news, the students of last year's class have volunteered to collect whatever news they have time to get. Their schedules in most cases are heavy; consequently, we particularly commend Shirley Baker, Leona Brown and Hugh Schram for the fine, co-operative work they have shown in suggesting the present arrangement.

Photography Class To Sponsor a Contest

The Photography Class is planning a contest on sport pictures every month.

The club is divided into two groups, the beginners and advanced groups. These pictures must be obtained by the last Wednesday of each month.

If the members plan to remain in the club, they must present one picture.

At their last meeting George Devory demonstrated to the class how to develop a film with the open gas process. Mr. Tooker then demonstrated how to develop films with the closed tank. Vern Nelson demonstrated how to print pictures.

Writers Read Works Before The Class

The Writers' Club met last Wednesday, October 9, in Miss Budd's room.

Paulette Gambee and Mary Tamm read some of their work. At their next meeting everyone is writing at least one article to be read before the class.

It was decided that the members would pay dues of five cents a week.

This club is not just for writers, but for anyone who would like to learn how to write.

SCIENTIFIC TERMS USED BY COOKS IMPROVES FOOD

Modern scientific cooks know the words. They keep up with the fast-growing list of special terms used in cookery. They know the fine distinction between "panbroiling," "sauteing," "frying," and "braising."

"Panbroiling" is one way to cook meat in a skillet on top of the stove. But home economics staff members at Michigan State College explain that the special point about panbroiling is cooking without added fat, without water, and without a cover on the skillet. It is the method used for tender chops and steaks that have fat of their own and are quickly cooked. Pour off the fat as it renders out, so the meat will not be frying.

"Frying" is a different cooking process. It means actually to cook in fat. Sometimes the fat is deep enough to cover the food entirely, as in frying chicken or croquettes. But one can also fry with shallow fat in a skillet. Hash and meat patties are good examples of shallow-fat frying; and some meats, such as sausages and bacon, fry in their own fat.

"Sauteing" is another puzzler, all the more confusing because it comes from a French word meaning to jump. Sauteing is a cross between panbroiling and frying. It means to brown the food in a little fat and turn it often to keep it from sticking.

The word "braising" comes up again and again in meat cookery. To braise means to brown in a little hot fat, and then cook the meat in steam—with or without added liquid. Swiss steak and pot roast are good examples. These meats at 10 a day.

Quarantine Effective In Controlling Rabies

When the quarantine in 47 counties was lifted last week, it ended the most extensive animal control measures the state has known since the blanket quarantine 25 years ago for hoof and mouth disease among cattle.

The dog quarantine was applied April 1 in all Lower Peninsula counties from the Ohio line to the southern limits of Manistee county on the west and Iscoo county on the east side of the state. The quarantine was the joint action of the State Department of Health and Agriculture.

Applied when rabies had reached an all-time peak of infection in the lower part of the state, the quarantine checked the epidemic effectively. Laboratories examining animal heads for rabies found only a quarter as many heads positive for rabies in August as they found in January. Pasture treatments given to persons bitten by mad dogs or by dogs suspected of being mad; also dropped off during the quarantine period from their high point last winter.

Dr. H. Allen Moyer, State Health Commissioner, and Elmer A. Deam, State Agriculture Commissioner, said a quarantine would be established if a rabies epidemic should again be threatened anywhere in the state.

The daily bag limit on geese reduced last year from five to four, has this year been lowered to added liquid. Swiss steak and pot roast. The bag limit on ducks reduced are good examples. These meats at 10 a day.
