Turkey Business Grows;

New Way of Marketing

Ohio's production of turkeys jumped from 175,000 in 1929 to 1,164,000 in 1939, giving the state eighth place in the national turkey parade, according to R. E. Cray, specialist in poultry husbandry for Ohio State university.

While Ohio was increasing its turkeys by 700 per cent, the nation only doubled the turkeys produced from 1929 to 1939. Ohio has several poultrymen who grow more than 5,000 turkeys a year. One man has raised about 20,000 in each of the last three years.

Mr. Cray says there are three main reasons for the upward trend in turkey production. Discovery of a way to control blackhead, previously the most deadly of poultry diseases, was the first factor. Putting the business on a production basis with incubators and brooders, and the development of a national appetite for turkey through the year instead of only on holidays, also helped.

The latest developments in marketing turkeys is a system of boning that leaves only turkey steaks, either light or dark, and permits the consumer to buy part of a turkey or a whole one. The development of better cold-storage facilities permits the housewife to buy them any month of the year.

Mr. Cray says turkey meat is a good bargain now because there is a larger than normal number in storage and the new crop will be ready for market in a short time. Meat held under the right conditions in cold storage improves in quality, he said.

Tapering Off Is Advice

Poured Out to Drinkers

Tapering off on the drinks is still the best way to treat alcoholism. Dr. D. A. Nicholson said in lecturing on the graduate medical course of the Washington State Medical society at King county hospital.

"Depriving the patient of alcohol entirely may bring on hallucinations and delay recovery," he said.

"By administering small quantities of alcohol, the sufferer from delirium tremens will be rid of his hallucinations in a few hours or in a day or two."

This method, he said, is merely a sobering up process. Effecting a cure calls for a study of each case individually, he said.

"We must learn why the patient drinks and try to remove the cause," he asserted.

"For example, some alcoholic patients get through work early in the afternoon and drink with friends before going home."

"It is necessary to help the chronic heavy drinker change his daily habits to keep him away from drink."

"Co-operation of the sufferer's wife or husband is half the battle."

The Light Must Shine

Most economy moves by cities, counties, states and countries are welcomed by its citizens, but Marquette, a little town in California, has objected to an economy move that would have saved the town $17 a month in its electricity use. Dating back longer than anyone seems to know, the light on the courthouse steeple has been lighted all night. One of the supervisors discovered that the bill for lighting the steeple clock for one month was $17.20. Since none looked "at the clock" after 10 p. m. the supervisor thought it was a good idea to turn the electricity off at that hour and save the money. But the supervising board thought it was worth the price when residents hinted they had heard vague rumblings of ghostly retaliation if the clock was not lighted all night. So now the clock remains lighted all night, and the county planners won't have to turn over in their graves, in fear of a tradition being swept aside.

Taste Like Dog Food

"Iron rations"—streamlined and brought strictly up to date—but still iron rations that taste like "dog food" is the complaint of a majority of 40,000 men who recently went through war maneuvers in southwestern Washington. The new field rations—officially designated as Type C—come in four cans. One contains 15 ounces of meat and vegetable hash, one 15 ounces of meat and beans, one 15 ounces of meat and vegetable stew and the fourth 4 1/2 ounces of hot biscuits, half an ounce of sugar and three-fourths of an ounce of soluble coffee. As one disillusioned National Guardsman summed it up, "If it's hot, it tastes like hot dog food and if it's cold, it tastes like cold dog food. That's the only difference."

Preventing Blast

Many farmers hesitate to pasture alfalfa and clover with their live stock because of the blast hazard, according to A. U. Thayer, supervisor of TVA demonstration farms. If the animals are first accustomed to the pasture pastures gradually, after they have eaten all the other grass they want, there isn't much danger. Having grass in a pasture mixture, dry roughage in the form of a straw stack and plenty of salt and water will help to prevent blast. They say, "Steers getting a full feed of corn blast less on ground ear corn than on shelled corn. He recommends that the chronic bloaters be culled out."

Man-Must-Live Thesis

Vocational guidance is paramount in an educational system designed to equip men and women to earn livings, Dr. T. Luther Purdom of the University of Michigan believes. It is his thought that school instruction must be predicated on a "man-must-live" thesis to prevent a revolt of youth and taxpayers.

Trees Must Be Inspected
Before They Are Moved

Because of the large number of vehicles that have been apprehended by the Department of Agriculture inspectors for carrying trees in violation of the insect pest and plant disease law, Commissioner Elmer A. Beamer this week cautioned motorists against this movement of nursery stock unless it has first been inspected on the premises where it is growing.
