

AT THE REDFORD THEATER

TOE-STUBBING
OUTLAWED BY BETTER LIGHTS

Stubbing a toe is a misdemeanor. At least that's the rating assigned to the mishap by members of the home economics staff at Michigan State College.

For the bruise usually means that more and better lights are in order. Good lighting is termed a step toward increased home safety, comfort and conveniences.

For farm homes the start of better lighting probably is out in the yard, where a light on a high pole can safeguard the home from prowlers and intruders and can make it easier to get to and from the house on a dark night.

Indoors, such things as a three-way switch for a stairway are recommended. Falling downstairs in the dark is a common and serious home accident. Bruises from colliding with furniture usually result from inaccessible switches or insufficient lighting.

A switch at the doorway of each room prevents much of these common collisions with furniture.

Another safety suggestion is the use of a small night light in an upstairs hallway. Other dim lights usually are not recommended, especially when they involve the use of colored bulbs. Better light for reading costs less nowadays, which means no economy in having poor lights and defective eyesight.

Mighty epic of a mighty nation, "The Howards of Virginia" opens Friday at the Redford Theatre to unfold a story torn out of the rugged background of America, a story so stirring and so timely that it might have been taken from today's headlines! A story of the birth of freedom and democracy in America, "The Howards of Virginia" is said to be a wondrously exciting, eye-stirring drama of the struggle between Tory aristocrat and simple man of the soil for the right to build a nation.

Grant and Martha Scott are costarred in the new Frank Lloyd production, which was based upon Elizabeth Page's sensational Literary Guild best-seller, "The Tree of Liberty." Sidney Buchman of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" fame, penned the adaptation, and the supporting cast includes: Cecil Redick, Alan Marshall and Richard Carlson.

Grant, deserting his light comedy roles for the Columbia picture, is said to give the screen the best performance of his career in his portrait of Matt Howard, brave, untamed frontiersman, who falls in love with a gracious Virginia belle and, with her, builds a home.

In the wilderness. It is not only a conquest of the soil which makes Grant's part so moving. It is the earnestness and the grim determination with which he is willing to give his life, willing to risk his home and his happiness, in the fight for American freedom—freedom to worship, freedom to speak and to write and to assemble—and the struggle for a government in which the majority shall rule and the minority shall have the right to speak freely.

There lies the timeliness which makes "The Howards of Virginia" something more than just a spectacular, colorful motion picture. "The Howards of Virginia" is a picture of a special type, and from it the world can learn a great deal, from it the world can learn that history's pages can supply the answers to today's problems.

The Michigan "coal basin" comprises an area estimated to include from 5,500 to 11,000 square miles of territory covering all or parts of 29 counties in the central section of the southern peninsula, although only about one-third of the beds contain workable coal.
