Cartel Is Monopoly
A cartel is a combination of industrial or business enterprises engaged in the same work for the purpose of attaining monopolistic control of the market, prices, production or patents. Each company retains its own identity and freedom of action except in the matters to which the common agreement may refer. Cartels may be national or international in scope. They are comparable to the great industrial holding companies organized in the United States.

The first cartel was organized in Germany (1882) by six firms that were at that time the only producers of stained metal tubes in Germany. The earliest conspicuously successful one was the "Irma" or International Rail Makers' association, organized in 1883. These organizations came very much to the fore in 1927, when they were considered a symbol of Europe's resentment against the American economic position in Europe and a weapon to fight the big industrial combines of the United States.

'Gummen' Were Indian Warriors
"Gummen" originally were not hoodlums but Indian warriors. The 1750 vintage gumman was mentioned in the Georgia Colonial Record: "A small party of Indians, consisting of one chief, six gummen and a woman come here this day." By 1818 "gummen" were cavalrymen; in the Congressional Debates, Andrew Jackson is recorded as speaking of one regiment of mounted gummen "to put down an Indian uprising. The word did not carry the stigma of an outlaw until 1905, according to the new American English dictionary of the University of Chicago Press, and even then it designated the desperadoes of the Wild West. The first use of the word in its present sense, the dictionary shows, was in 1916, when Carl Sandburg wrote: "I have seen the gummen kill and go free to kill again."

Simple Ways Suggested To Prevent Nervousness

Learn to relax, both at work and during leisure hours. If you want to avoid that bugaboo of civilization, nervous tension, Leonard Allen, New York, advises. Here are a few simple suggestions:

At work avoid the strain of monotony and immobility; get up and stretch or walk about for a few moments each hour. Plan a complete break from activity sometime during the day.

Check up periodically to see whether your workday activities are all aimed directly at the attainment of your goal. Tolerate useless activities only as recreation. Keep away from unnecessary deadlines.

If you are a housewife, Mr. Allen suggests, "keep a chair or stool in the kitchen so that you may be seated while you work. Avoid body strain by wearing sensible shoes, not bedroom slippers. Eat at mealtime, and keep away from the icebox between times. Set aside a regular rest period each day. Do not be excessively fussy about housework; strike a happy medium instead."

During your leisure, learn to forget your work entirely. Recreation should not involve activity too closely resembling your work. Nor is it wise to clutter your leisure time with ceaseless activity. "People unwisely assume that vigorous recreational activity will naturally neutralize tension developed on their jobs, but this may not be true," the author says. "Unless rest is an intermediary, new exertion will simply create added strain. Always devote a certain portion of your leisure to complete rest."

Black, White Not Colors

Black and white are not considered colors, speaking in the physical sense; black indicates the total absence of light, while white, on the other hand, is the combination of all the colors of the spectrum. In art, however, black and white are colors.

Doctors Examine Causes Of High Blood Pressure

Patients with high blood pressure should be studied with regard to the effect of posture on the hypertension, and those in whom the pressure falls markedly when confined strictly to the recumbent posture should have their urinary tracts studied by X-ray, and if nephropathy (downward displacement of the kidney) is found some supportive measure for the latter should be instituted, William S. McCann, M. D., Rochester, N. Y., declares in the Journal of the American Medical Association in a paper prepared in collaboration with Monroe J. Romansky, M. D., also of Rochester.

The author says that such a study of the effect of posture on blood pressure should be made by comparing the pressure when standing upright with that found when lying flat.

By supporting the kidneys by such measures as corseting, the blood pressure may be lowered and stabilized and many of the symptoms which accompany the hypertension may thus be relieved. It is pointed out, however, that "nephropathy does not always result in hypertension."

Footprints on Ceiling

Footprints in the sands of time? Not footprints on the ceiling of the Hall of Geology in the Buffalo Museum of Science. They were placed there because that's how they were originally found, protruding from the lower surface of the sandstone roof of a coal mine near Cedaredge, Colo., after a seam of coal had been removed. The footprints are perhaps the largest in the world, measuring 24 inches in length. They are of a gigantic reptile with a stride of 15 feet 2 inches. "The great reptile which possessed this enormous walking stride, the longest one known, had three toes and must have towered more than 30 feet in height," Irving G. Reimann, curator at the museum, explained.

'Mother Knows Best' Doesn't She?

Guiding their inquiring minds and dynamic activities... choosing their food, clothes, entertainment and health needs... the well-informed modern mother knows what is best for the welfare of her offspring. And it is safe to say that an incalculable share of her accurate information has had its beginning in the advertising columns of this newspaper.

Many of the advertisements today bristle with ideas. They are more than catalogs. In the true sense, they are education! Scientific minds contribute to their contents. Their recommendations are based on deep thought. Their words are carefully chosen; their diction studiously formed for clarity and understanding.

Through advertisements the mother of today learns authoritatively about new methods in the care of children's teeth. About antiseptics and hygienics. About body-building and health-giving foods. About new comforts as well as new styles, in juvenile wearing apparel. About books and schools and vacation camps. The advertisements pour innumerable hints and suggestions into her store of knowledge. They make her a more capable manager of the home and guardian of the family exchequer.

"Mother knows best"—is this expression heard about your home? Is it just an admonition? Or, is it founded on facts. Reading advertisements will to help make it so.
