MATCHED

By ADELAID D. HUFF

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

"GEE, Golly, this is the dearest place that ever was!" Margaret Adair exclaimed to herself as she sat on the porch of the old farmhouse and listened to the tiny songs of myriad insects in the dewy grass.

Back home they called her Margaret the Heartless, Margaret the Flapper. All men were grist to her mill, she openly admitted; but if she had ever once become the least bit interested herself no one ever found out. She knew exactly the route her affairs would take—firm admission, ardent love-making and subsequent proposal followed by a flat refusal.

It was natural that Elmwood Farm should prove a trifle monotonous to Margaret, but the doctor had said that a complete rest was essential after her breakdown and had insisted that she be sent where late hours would be impossible.

At the sound of footsteps on the gravelled walk, Margaret looked toward the house. Margaret and Bill Dickson came slowly up the path. Such a plain little thing, Margaret reflected. How did she manage to get even a country man interested? At the steps they stopped and Bill kissed the girl good night.

"You're the sweetest little thing," he whispered, holding her close. "You love me?"

"Oh, Bill," the girl answered, "how can you love me after seeing that pretty Miss Adair? I was so afraid I believe I'd die!"

"Shucks," Bill laughed. "She couldn't make any feller love her. She's too stuck on her nose. She wouldn't give a snap for a dozen like her."

"So-o-o," thought Margaret, her eyes narrowing in the dark. "I'll have to start a campaign. Here's something to do at last!"

In a moment Claire ran into the house. Bill turned and went home and Margaret, still undiscovered, sat on in the doorway and thought. Bill owned half interest in the adjoining farm, she knew, and she had often watched him as he followed the plow.

The next morning Margaret appeared in her smart knicker suit. She knew how absurdly diminutive she looked in this outfit, and that it was always a sure-fire hit. As soon as breakfast was over, she climbed the fence that divided the two farms and picked her way over the rough, soddy ground.

"Good morning," she called as she approached Bill and the tongs standing at the end of a row. "I wanted to pat your horses."

She put out a daintily manicured hand and stroked the neck of the nearest horse. The animal shied lightly and Margaret jumped back.

"Oh, he frightened me," she said in a scared little voice.

"He won't hurt you," said Bill protectively. "I'll hold his bridle. Now, you can pat him all you want."

"I'm awfully lonesome up here," the girl said pensively after a moment. "I'm just dying to take some hikes around here; but I haven't anyone to go with me and I've afraid to go alone. I'm crazy to go up on Sunset Hill, but—"

"Would you go with me?" Bill asked after a moment.

"Oh, would you take me?" exclaimed Margaret, clapping her hands. "When could we go? After supper tonight?"

"Yes, I reckon that'd be all right. You could meet me over at that oak at the far side of the field. I—"

"Yes, I know," Margaret answered quickly.

"You're engaged to Claire and she might like it. We won't tell her."

That evening Margaret ran along the edge of the field toward the big oak tree. There she found Bill waiting for her.

"You have the most adorable way of smoking a pipe," she greeted him. "It's so—he-manish or something."

Bill laughed and took her arm as they started off toward Sunset Hill. They climbed for an hour or more before reaching the top, then finally dropped on a huge rock to rest.

"It's gorgeous here," she said after a moment, slipping her arm around him. "It's so—he-manish or something."

"Of course not, silly," she laughed.

She felt his arm tighten around her and a second later kisses were raining on her face.

"Bill, you're darling," she whispered at last. "Why—why—what's the matter?" she stammered.

"Nothing," he answered. "It's just like I thought. All these city girls are alike. I've been to town once or twice myself. It'd like to see you kiss a fellow like that. I've seen more than once or twice in her life and him engaged to another girl at that!"

For a second Margaret stared at him in the dim light of the moon, then suddenly she burst out laughing. "That's the biggest joke on me yet," she said at last.

"You don't see the joke," she answered irritably.

"No, you wouldn't," Margaret retorted good naturedly.

HIT PICTURES ARE SCHEDULED FOR THE CIVIC

An action-packed tale of justice heads the Civic Theatre's double feature program on Sunday and Saturday—"Trail of the Vigilantes," starring Franchot Tone and Andy Devine. Another of the popular "Lone Wolf" pictures is the other offering. Entitled "The Lone Wolf Keeps a Date" the latest episode again features a Warren Williams in the title role. Supporting him are Frances Robinson and Eric Blore. The latest chapter of the serial "Adventures of Captain Marvel" will also be shown.

The story of communication is told in "Western Union" which comes to the Civic on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. A large cast, headed by Robert Young, Randolph Scott and Dean Jagger, makes this a "must" on your list. The accompanying film is another series picture—the title the latest of the "Maiste" adventures. Entitled "Maiste Was a Lady," it again features Ann Southern in her intangible character role of "Maiste" Gay. Lifting tones make "No No Nanette" one of the most entertaining movies of the year. In the leading role is Anna Neagle, who will be remembered as the star of "The Great Train Robbery" with Bob Steele and Monte Blue. These two features will be offered on Wednesday and Thursday, merchants' family nights at the Civic.

The girls of Troop 8 went hiking on their meeting day this week. Sarah Nelson, assistant leader, accompanied the girls. Mr. Earl Vivier is troop leader.

RECORD SHIPMENT OF IRON ORE EXPECTED IN '41

Shipments of iron ore from the upper peninsula of Michigan this year are expected to exceed last year's total, yet be slightly less than the all-time high of 1929, G. Eddy, mining geologist of the conservation department said, on his return from a survey of mining properties in the peninsula.

Expected shipments will approximate 15,000,000 tons of ore this year from 38 active mines, Eddy said. Shipments of two new mines, one at Ishpeming and one at Iron River, are being sunk, but these are not expected to be in production this year.

Fifty-one active mines in 1929 produced 18,679,142 tons of ore, the most shipped in any one year from the peninsula. In that year the Goebble range shipped 7,624,065 tons, the Marquette range shipped 5,409,712 tons, and the Mesabi range dispatched 5,645,265 tons.

Last year's total from upper peninsula mines was 12,771,279 tons, of which 4,749,065 came from the Goebble range. 5,920,463 from the Marquette, and 3,011,751 from the Mesabi.

The upper Great Lakes region is expected to ship about 75,000,000 tons of iron ore this year, nearly 9,000,000 tons more than the highest previous total of 66,187,559 set in 1929. These figures include ore from mines in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Canada.

BIG PINE SUCCEUMS

Reduced to saw-logs, the 50-foot stub of the "Granddaddy" white pine of Interlochen state park stands 2,560 board feet, park atendants report after cutting down the historic landmark. It had been saved since June, when the top 75 feet was broken off in a windstorm. In the hope that the tree would still live. The biggest tree in the park, the old pine had a stump 50 inches in diameter.

A Texas motorist who ran down and killed a deer paid $19.50 for repairs to his automobile, besides a $21 fine and costs when he was arrested for running into the deer deliberately.
