Adequate Wiring

Improves Lights

There is a little more to the phrase "adequate wiring" than is usually visualized. Everyone is familiar with the necessity of sufficient electrical outlets and the convenience of enough switches to light the way around the house, but not all home owners are acquainted with "wire capacity" or "light that is right" or the need to prepare for the future. When a heavy duty appliance is used, such as iron or washing machine, a voltage drop is caused and the lights in the house will be slightly dimmed. That is the result of insufficient wire capacity. A reliable electrician can inform the home owner as to the proper gauge wire necessary.

Ceiling or bracket lights controlled by wall switches should be installed in all rooms, halls, and porches. If a wall switch controls a lighting unit serving movable lights then ceiling or bracket lights may be omitted in the living room.

In all homes more electric appliances are being used now than ever before. Undoubtedly, the next few years will see the development of many more electrical appliances that will be used in homes. House wiring and outlets should be adequate to take care of them.

Many Attend Baseball Clinic

Approximately 50 boys from Farmington and the surrounding territory participated in the baseball school held Monday, August 4 at the High School Field.

The school, arranged by Paul Shoemaker, high school recreational director, featured the instructions of John Kobs, baseball coach at Michigan State College and Wally Pipp, former triple baseman with the New York Giants. The boys were shown the proper ways to field and bat and instructed in the fundamentals of good baseball.

Following the instruction period conducted by Kobs and Pipp, baseball games were held between Farmington and Ford Republic. The Farmington boys won 9 to 2. Fred Martindale pitched for Farmington and won behind the steady hitting of his team mates. Bob Lehr was the leading batter for the Farmington team getting 4 hits in as many times at bat. Bill Holmes also starred with a home run.

Winners of the six leagues comprising district six of the NYA Junior baseball program will compete in the district tournament to be held August 12, 14 and 15. It was announced this week by Olin W. Kaye, state NYA administrator.

On August 12, the winner of the South Oakland and Livingston county leagues will meet in Farmington. Semi-final games will be played at Ypsilanti on August 13 and the final game will be played at Ypsilanti on August 15.

The district championships will compete with seven other district winners in a state tournament to be held in Lansing and East Lansing on August 20, 21, and 22.

The first round and semi-final games will be played at Michigan State College and the final game will be played on August 22 under the lights of Lansing's municipal stadium.
