

COLD WEATHER SUGGESTION
King Winter seemed to be putting in an appearance Tuesday when a few flutters of snow floated down to earth. Of course you practically had to have a microscope to see them, but they were there nevertheless. All of which serves as a reminder that it won't be long now before the old galoshes will have to come out of the closet.

AND, HOBBOES STARVE
Robert Hoover would have had a fit if he'd have seen the food that went to waste Tuesday when somebody arrayed a lunch or parts thereof on the window sill of the Municipal Building. Among the aforementioned victuals was a hamburger bun, an onion and a cucumber. If there'd only have been some hamburger and catsup some knight of the road might have had a high up to perfect sandwich.

IT NEVER RAINS
but it pours—or once you get something started, you can't stop it. It's our long-winded titles for stories on flowers growing out of the ground. This week it's a continuation of the garden of Mrs. A. C. Pazderka on Parker avenue. Mrs. Mitchell on Oakland has rambler roses in bloom.

ALMOST A CENTURY
C. N. Andrews of Shawassaw street will be 99 years old next Tuesday. What a lot of history one would know by that time—pioneer settlements, Civil, Spanish-American, and World Wars I and II, men flying in the air or racing on railroads, tracks or concrete highways, traveling around the world via telephone, and radio; cures for diseases, nearly always fatal in his younger days; and so on into the night.

AHEAD OF THE STORY
Some of the local youngsters have evidently found their fingers itching for bars of soap and the neighbors' windows even if Halloween is still in the offing. On scrutinizing pieces of glass about the town, there is reason to believe that certain mothers will have to buy more soap before they do next week's washing.

Better get yourself a little red cross to stick in your window. With the suffering war brings plus the other local and national catastrophe that are bound to happen, the Red Cross will need your support more than ever this year. It's representatives will be around any day now.

Orchids Shown To Exchangeites

Stanley Norton of Ypsilanti was the guest speaker at the meeting of the Exchange Club Wednesday noon. Mr. Norton was one of the most entertaining speakers the Club has had the privilege of hearing.
He and his son traveled through Mexico and he related many interesting experiences of the journey. He told of the custom of fumigating everything at the border, before any trucks or produce of any kind are permitted to enter the United States. Rarely does a truck pass that three or four Mexicans, attempting to enter the States illegally, do not meet their death in the process.
While journeying through Mexico, Mr. Norton was able to add about 150 plants of 45 varieties to his hobby, orchid growing. Mr. Norton first became interested in orchids about seven years ago when a plant was given to him. He determined to find out what was wrong with his method of caring for the plant when it did not thrive and hence became more deeply interested in orchids.
Contrary to public opinion, orchids are easy to grow, according to Mr. Norton. There are about forty growers in the United States at the present time, and Mr. Norton himself now has a collection valued at $4,000. He brought several specimens with him, and also some blossoms of the Passion flower. He stated that there are 15,000 known varieties of orchids.
"Dr. G. F. Weaver, assisted by Walter Coot, E. J. Hohlner and Howard Coot, is in charge of the programs for the month of November. There will be no meeting on Wednesday, November 12, but on Thursday, the 13th, members of the Farmington Club, together with members of five other clubs in the district, will meet for a luncheon meeting at Huck's Redford Inn. Captain Douglas and Leonard of the State Police will lecture to the group on "Civilian Defense."

The drive will continue until Thanksgiving.

Kiwanians Hear Edward Werner

Illustrating his talk on "Reminiscences of Old Showmen", with interesting back stage glimpses at well known personalities, Edward Werner, former director of the Michigan Theatre Symphony Orchestra, spoke before the Farmington Kiwanis Wednesday evening.
It was Ladies Night for Kiwanis, and this special program was held in their honor. Joseph Himmelsbach was in charge of the program.

Mr. Werner began his talk with an explanation of classical music and how to gain a greater appreciation of it. He asked that people forget the melody in listening to a popular piece and in a short time they will be in a position to enjoy classical music.

Following this same pattern, Mr. Werner brought in many of the Little-known qualities of Paul Whiteman, Fred Harding, Guy Lombardo and Benny Goodman. Because of his former position with the Michigan Theatre, Mr. Werner became very well acquainted with these popular musicians.
Outside the music field, Mr. Werner furnished his audience with brief personal sketches of Joe Penner, Bob Burns, Mary Pickford, and Will Rogers. He paid a great tribute to each of these showmen, as he knew them personally.

Guests of honor for the evening were the faculty of the Farmington Public Schools and their wives.

Next week's meeting will be devoted to the election of officers for the coming year.

City's Oldest Resident To Be 99 Years Young

Believed to be Farmington's oldest resident, C. N. Andrews of 3209 Shawassaw street will count himself 99 years young next Tuesday, November 4. His daughter, Miss Meriah Andrews, with whom he lives, will hold open house in his honor Sunday afternoon, November 1, and invites all their friends to call and enjoy a cup of tea with them.

Although his hearing is very poor and his eyesight not so good, Mr. Andrews gets around fine with the help of his cane and "seems better than he has been for years." He has been very ill many times but has rallied back to good health each time. Last winter he had both pneumonia and a stroke.

Having been born and reared in Oakland County on a farm on Sixteen Mile Road and having lived only there and at his present address, his life hasn't been particularly exciting. However, his wife Sarah J. lived long enough for them to observe their sixty-ninth wedding anniversary together. Mrs. Andrews died in September of 1939 and their 70 years of married life would have been complete in December.

Mr. Andrews is the father of four children all of whom are living:

Four Men Added To Police Force Over Halloween

Police Chief Kowalski has sent out a plea to all parents to see that their children are occupied over "Halloween" with activities other than destructive ones.
By authority of Mayor Leo Glidewelter and Police Commissioner Mar Hulett, four extra men will be added to the present police force over the Halloween period. These men will patrol the business and residential districts. At least two additional cars will be used for this purpose.
"I will go the limit for good, clean sport," Kowalski said, but he urged that destruction of property be eliminated. Many dollars in property is destroyed every year and much inconvenience incurred due to the petty Halloween pranks Kowalski added, and "it is our intention to stop it."

Stop Signs
Enforcement of traffic regulations in this City was also emphasized by Kowalski. "People are not observing stop signs and tickets will be issued to violators," Kowalski said. Failure to stop for a stop sign is necessary not just a snafu of gears. "These signs were placed there for your protection, to disallow them is not just breaking the law but is endangering your life and the lives of others."

Kowalski added, for those who continue to disobey this rule, traffic violation tickets will be issued.

Kowalski Attends Meeting
Wednesday evening, October 29, Police Chief Kowalski attended a law enforcement meeting in Pontiac. The meeting was called by the Oakland County Prosecuting Attorney's office for the purpose of law enforcement of traffic violators. All police officers in Oakland County were invited to attend.
