1,000 vehicles an hour on South Saginaw street, one of the principal thoroughfares. This recently has been cut by 100 vehicles an hour.

As success of the "Michigan Plan," became more certain, field representatives of the Automotive Safety Foundation reported more than 1,000 inquiries had been received already at the Washington office. The plan also has the approval of the Highway Traffic Advisory Committee to the War Department, and the city of Detroit, confronting its most critical period in 20 years of operating the street-railway system, is seriously considering adoption of the plan for setting the maximum use out of limited transportation facilities.

"To aid other cities in developing a war conservation traffic plan," Kennedy stated, "results of the Pontiac experiment are being compiled and will soon be made available to all interested cities and organizations."

Work of perfecting an organization for the volunteer war-time program was turned over to Leonard C. Sauer, administrative assistant to Commissioner Kennedy. The organization includes local advisory and technical committees, co-administrators for industry, labor, business and bus companies, and scores of volunteer workers.

To gain a maximum use of automobiles, the program calls for a discontinuance of all unnecessary driving, a "club plan" for factory workers whereby not less than four persons ride and alternate use of their cars, and effective use of all other transportation facilities.

Maximum use of buses was obtained by staggering factory shifts, rescheduling of buses, school hours, business and office hours, and by getting housewives to shop at off-peak times.

Extent to which the plan affects the lives of the average person may be seen by the fact that war plants rescheduled shifts. Those in the north part of the city now start at 6, 7 and 8 a.m., and those in the south sections at 6:30, 7:30 and 8:30 a.m.

Stores have changed their opening hours from 9 to 10 o'clock and schools from 8:30 to 9:00 and 9:15. Other businesses have rescheduled their opening and closing hours so as to lighten the peak transportation hours.

An example of the work done was in the formation of the "club plan" for war plant workers. Plant managers and union officials were contacted, and supported the plan 100 per cent.

Each worker was given a pledge card, upon which he listed the residence section number where he lives. All residential areas had been numbered and listed on large charts. Tabulations were made from the cards and workers brought together. Voluntary grouping also was encouraged and resulted in many workers forming their own clubs.

Once aware of the necessity for prolonging the life of all available transportation facilities, Commissioner Kennedy declared the universal acceptance of the Michigan Plan proves Americans are only too willing to make the sacrifices necessary to guarantee success of the war production program.

AT THE REDFORD THEATER

"It's the best play I have seen in ten years!" So wrote George M. Cohan after he had seen "Remember the Day" on Broadway, adding his tribute to that of thousands of others who saw and love this poignant drama conceived by Philo Higley and Philip Dunning.

20th Century-Fox immediately perceived the play's potentialities, and sought to obtain the screen rights. When it was announced that the film was going to be made, speculation was rampant about who would play the central figure.

Claudette Colbert settled all discussion when she picked "Remember the Day" from several offers. She is the one picture she wanted to do. Turning from recent top-flight comedy roles, this versatile actress climaxes her career with her unforgettable portrayal in this memorable love story.

Cast for the important role opposite Miss Colbert was handsome John Payne, who has been gathering laurels for himself in such outstanding pictures as "Sun Valley Serenade" and "Week-End in Havana."

Two juveniles in the featured supporting cast give excellent accounts of themselves—Young Douglas Cratt, a recent discovery, and Ann Todd. John Shepperd plays the role of Dewey Roberts, while Jane Seymour is the only member of the cast who played the same role in the stage production.

Rebber Pillow
All who like to sleep on their stomachs, but get tired of having to keep rearranging their pillows in order to breathe freely gaped recently at an invention consisting of an adjustable doughnut-shaped soft rubber pillow that supports head and shoulders. It keeps the face floating an inch or so above the mattress. Something of this sort should do much to obviate the need for having children's teeth straightened. Orthodontists say that continuous sleeping on mounds and chins is responsible for lack of development of the lower jaw that only teeth straightening can help.

Don't Drive When Hungry
Studies made among traffic violators show that many suffer from lack of sugar in the blood. After eating chocolate such people become more careful in their driving and their rate of accidents and violations is reduced. The lesson from this is never to drive a car when you are hungry. Hunger brings down the blood sugar level; it may make you ill-mannered in a motor sense so that you race other cars, block out other drivers, and weave in and out of traffic lanes recklessly.

Beginning May 1st, we are installing the universal 3c store bottle. All Farmington Dairy coins or checks accompanied by bottle will be refunded until May 15th. Please return all bottles and coins before that date.
