A group of delegates attended the Annual Meeting of the Detroit Baptist Association at the Bethel Baptist Church on Thursday, October 1. It was an all day meeting.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH NOTES

The Church Board will meet on Tuesday, October 6, at 8 p.m. with the Women's Guild meeting on Wednesday, October 7 at 2 p.m. and the Brotherhood meeting the same day at the evening at 8 p.m.

The members of the Women's Guild wish to sincerely thank Mrs. Phoebe Ross for so generously donating a quilt top and Mrs. Gladys Schroeder the filler.

A WEEKLY THOUGHT

A blessed thing about keeping busy—we don't have time to grow old.

ACTIVITIES

The Surgical Dressing Unit meets every Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Town Hall.

The Sewing Unit will meet every Thursday, starting October 2, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the American Legion Home. Everyone is invited to give whatever time they can to either or both units, if only an hour.

W.C.T.U. OFFICERS
ARE RE-ELECTED
FOR ANOTHER YEAR

At the annual meeting of the Farmington W.C.T.U. held at the home of Mrs. LaVila Noble on the afternoon of September 22, all the officers of the preceding year were re-elected.

The devotionals were on Prayer, with Psalms 1 and 146 used as a Scriptural Reading. The program consisted of topics taken from the Washington Letters of Elizabeth A. Smart, and were as follows: Think on these things; Psalms 8:60; Salvaging of the cans; Li-quer gets ship space rather than food; Washington about the Drink; These articles were read by Mrs. Martha Warner, Mrs. John Lutz, Mrs. Ruth Erwin and Mrs. Noble.

The last two books reviewed are new books dealing with war.

How War Came—Forrest Davis and Ernest K. Lindley.

One of the latest books to be printed on the war. It deals more with the policy of the United States and the part it has played in diplomatic relations to date.

Mr. Davis and Mr. Lindley are newspaper correspondents of many years standing and their facts have been obtained not only from personal contacts with statesmen and diplomats, but from day to day records in the press.

How War Came presents an entirely different light on the policy of the United States, as most of us have seen it pointing out and giving details as to how desperately we tried NOT to become involved in this world conflict. "An American 'White Paper'." From the Fall of France to Pearl Harbor.

Time Runs Out—Henry J. Taylor. In this new book are thrills, excitement and danger. A true account of Europe as it was the last two months before Germany declared war on the United States. Written into this book are situations few of us have ever dreamed of.

Mr. Taylor was the last American permitted in and out of Germany and his accounts came from the lips of actual people and things he actually saw. He visited England and all of the continent and listened to Hitler's declaration of war in Lisbon on December 11.

Time Runs Out presents the greatest danger in which our way of living and all of civilization stands, and gives the only possible solution. Though a disquieting book, it should be on the list of every thoughtful American.

The Song of Bernadette—Franz Werfel. In his escape from Europe, Franz Werfel spent several weeks in the old French city of Lourdes. It was there he learned of Bernadette Soubirous and vowed to write a novel of her life—if he made his journey safely, as an offering of thanks.

Bernadette was to have beheld a vision in her youth and the story pertains to the cruel attempts to discredit her.

Franz Werfel does not ask the readers of his story to believe in this miracle—just to believe in Bernadette.

Many characters come to life in this story, from outcasts of society to kings. A beautiful, strong story that springs from the human soul; a most tender and touching novel, in these times.

Road to Folly—Leslie Ford. The colorful background of this mystery novel, in which Leslie Ford reveals her sheer mastery of atmosphere, warm, living characterization and constant suspense, is laid in the Charleston, S.C. of palm shaded trees and old plantations.

A constant series of exciting and suspicious incidents, with three deaths before the murderer is apprehended makes this book a super-duper of a mystery thriller, filled with action, suspense, romance and mystery.

SUGAR SHORTAGE
DOES NOT AFFECT
APPLE BUTTER

A new recipe for apple butter, requiring no sugar, has come from the OPA office, and may be of interest to housewives who are interested in canning, but who find themselves short of sugar.

Sugarless Apple Butter

Peel, core and quarter the desired quantity of apples. Boil sweet cider until it is reduced one-half. While the cider is boiling rapidly, add apples and cook until the mixture is the desired thickness. Sweeten with desired amount of cane syrup. Cook the mixture slowly until it thickens again, stirring constantly, and skimming when necessary. Seal in sterilized jars or containers.

Good Base for Meatless Meals

Enriched white bread can help to pinch-hit for meat. It supplies the same important "meat" vitamins and minerals, as well as proteins. Crisp, hot, enriched bread, Patsy Shells, filled with creamed fish or vegetables, make meatless meals an unexpected pleasure!

—by Katharine Irving Leachbrook

THERE'S NO NEED for "meatless meals" to be dreary!

With a bit of clever planning, substitute dishes can gather fans of their own. Just be sure to make them ring the bell on these three counts: (1) attractive appearance, (2) appetizing flavor, (3) good food value.

Bread Patty Shells, for instance, score nicely in all three categories. Aside from their interesting appearance, their delicious crunchiness, the bread used helps to pinch-hit for the meat itself.

How? Well, first of all, bread helps to satisfy that "empty" feeling some folks get when an expected meat course is missing! Actually, it does supply proteins (meat is primarily a protein food), as well as helpful food-energy.

Enriched white bread is particularly high in the important vitamins and minerals natural to meat—vitamin B, niacin, and other B-complex vitamins, and iron.

Look for "Enriched"

Be sure the white bread you use for meatless menus (in fact, for all meals) is the vitamin-enriched kind. Seventy-five per cent of all bakers' white bread today is enriched with vitamins and minerals. You can tell which these loaves are because the word "enriched" is on the wrapper, in accordance with the recommendations of the Com-

BREAD PUDDING
IS SO GOOD
THESE COOL DAYS

As the air becomes chillier and appetites are whetted to unheard-of proportions, we begin to think of heavier and more nourishing foods. My starved condition yesterday begged me to have Bread Pudding for dinner last night and the whole family enjoyed it. It is a recipe I learned to use when I attended cooking class in the eighth grade of school. It can be varied by the addition of raisins, dates, nuts, apricots or coconut. To make a fancier dessert serve with vanilla sauce or whipped cream.

BREAD PUDDING

2 cups scalded milk
1/4 cup sugar
1 cup stale bread crumbs (or 2 1/4 slices broken fine)
2 ts. melted butter
1 egg
Pinch salt
1/4 tsp. Vanilla or
Spiral nutmeg or cinnamon over top.

Add bread crumbs to milk; when cool add sugar, eggs slightly beaten, salt, butter and flavoring. Bake one hour in buttered baking dish in a slow oven (300 degrees). Serves four.

THE GARDEN PATH

I sincerely hope you got those last few flowers cut and in the house before that hard, killing frost came! We know it's inevitable, but how we dread the morning when we arise to find everything so stiff and unnatural—covered with white icing of frost—until the farming rays of the sun make the plant world look as though it had been seared by fire.

From that first frost on, our gardening takes on a different aspect. Already we start preparing and planning for the next year of blooms, crops and harvests. An endless cycle, that means life to mankind.

Why not take up a few of your chrysanthemum plants and "pot" them for blooming in the house this fall. Disturb the roots as little as possible, by leaving a good ball of earth around them. Very few of us amateur gardeners get the full beauty of these plants because the hard frosts of any early fall stunt the blooms.

Dig up all the gladioli before they have died down to where you can't find them, and dig the dahlias roots, a few days after the first killing frost. Let these dry and then store them the same as dahlias, but I have always brought them into the service porch, planted them in sand and kept lightly watered through the winter. This year it's going to be a little different. My husband is making a flower box that will extend on two

A WORD TO THE WIVES

Hello there—last week after rummaging through all my old keepsakes, we got down to what we started after, too late to talk about it—so that's where we'll start today.

It's a letter from my father on my eighteenth birthday, but first maybe I had better tell you a little bit about him. It's rather hard to describe your father but I'll do the best I can. He has raised three girls and that in itself is a job. I suppose as each one of us arrived, he would hope it would be a boy—but that boy never came. I don't know why a man always thinks he wants a boy—but they always do. So your Daddy had to do without his boy and I hope in some measure we girls have made it up to him. He is kind and generous to a fault and so understanding.

I can remember once, when I was around sixteen and after a disturbing experience, felt the whole world was down on me. Daddy asked me to go for a walk with him. It was a winter Sunday afternoon and I was very restless when we started out. We didn't talk—just walked—but I'll never forget it. I could feel his love and understanding and that was all I needed.

Daddy never spanked us girls, that was always Mother's job. Bless her heart. She should have given us loads more, I can realize that now. But when I was about thirteen, I made the statement, in my father's presence that I was too big to spank now—well, he promptly showed me "bad" I was too big to spank—and were my feelings hurt, or rather I should say my dignity.

It's rather hard to talk about Daddy and not include Mother—they are almost one. They have set a pattern of personal as well as married life for us girls to follow after, that sometimes it's hard going. Consideration, kindness, love, understanding are the words that have crowned their lives together. And there human—that is so necessary to a rich character. They never condemn—they try to understand. I know I would give a lot to live the last five years over again that I was home—and try and be a little more understanding and considerate myself. Not that I was any worse than any other daughter, I hope. It's just that all children, as a rule, aren't considerate of their parents, until they also become themselves.

My father is no saint, I hope I haven't given that impression. He gets mad occasionally, and very often "grows" when he has to do something, but he always does it in the end anyway.

I wish every girl of eighteen could get a letter like this one. It would not only make her think at the time—but give her something to keep and read, with love in her heart and tears in her eyes, for the rest of her life. It goes like this: "To my Darling Daughter, Eighteen years ago there was a little girl came to our house, whom we christened (my name). During those 18 years she has brought a lot of joy and happiness, and some heartaches. But we still love her and have faith in her and know that she will only do that which her Mother and Father would want her to do. Enclosed you will find a photograph of one of the best Mothers in the world. I would like to have you keep this and use it as a standard to mould your life, so it will be as good as the one who suffered to bring you into this world. Wishing you many more happy birthdays, Your loving Father."

What more can I say after that—bye now.

THIS AND THAT—

Most women have been wearing their hair with rolls, puffs and curls on top of their heads for so long, that it looks funny to see one with her hair smooth and flat on top—try it on yourself, some morning and see how funny you look.

Have you bought any of the new boxes of kitchen cleanser yet? Well—I have found them to be just heavy paper and the first time I used it the bottom got wet and almost came off. So I dumped the powder in a jar with a screw cap on it and punched holes in the top and it works fine.

Speaking of scouring reminds me that the steel wool pads we relied on so much are almost as extinct as the well-known Dodo Bird. But spare your nails and soak the pots and pans better and keep on hand, for the purpose, a soap from a tin can to scrape off the stubborn bits of dried food.

While autumn colors and the invigorating air makes you feel glad to be alive—there is something rather sad about seuffing through the dead and fallen leaves.
