Teachers Sue Board

FARMINGTON Legal action was started in Oakland County Circuit Court last week by the teachers' union which is asking a payment of $25,000 from Farmington Schools.

The Farmington Education Association (FEA), sole bargaining agent for teachers, filed the action which places burden on the Farmington Board of Education to argue whether the court should order payment of $25,000, with interest, costs and attorneys' fees, to aggrieved union members.

ROGER ALLEN, FEA executive director, says the school board's unwillingness to abide by an arbitration award granted Sept. 15, 1971, by Arbitrator Dr. E.J. Forsythe.

The arbitrator had ruled against the board's action of reducing the number of weeks worked by counselors and librarians in December 1970. The remedy asked by the FEA, and eventually mandated by the arbitrator, was that extra weeks be restored to librarians and counselors who would then be compensated for time lost.

Mike Sharp Earns Eagle

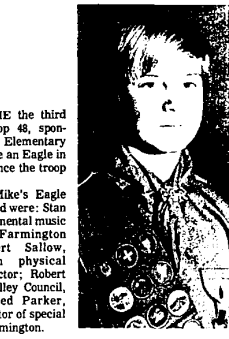

FARMINGTON Michael Sharp, 14, earned the rank of Eagle scout after designing and executing a six-week physical education program for special education classes of Farmington schools.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Sharp of Marklawn Dr., Farmington. His mother, known to friends as "Dinghy," is a special education staff member for Farmington Schools and leader of the volunteer Bucket Brigade program.

MORE THAN 100 persons were present to see Mike receive his eagle rank at court of honor ceremonies held Jan. 10 in North Farmington High School auditorium.

For his eagle community service project, Mike designed the program for classes with the mentally retarded, deaf or orthopedic, adjusted study and pre-school speech programs.

Scouts Bob Eady, Jim Spangenberg, Mike Neitzel and Steve Harris were also trained to help in this project. Because of this project, other young persons will be asked to serve in the Farmington summer school program as aides.

Farm'ton Tax Base Increases

FARMINGTON The value of new construction topped the $15 million mark in 1971 in the City of Farmington, reports Jay Harrison, building department director.

During the past year, described as a building boom by City Manager John Dinan, the city issued 764 building permits with construction costs totaling $15,152,940.

BIGGEST contributor to the boom were 690 new apartment units valued at $11.4 million. New residential construction was valued at $1.8 million and new commercial buildings at $1.2 million.

Most of the apartment construction involved building permits issued for 384 units of the Chatham Hills apartments in August with construction valued at $2.5 million and 192 units of Drakeshire apartments in November valued at $2.2 million.

Other major construction projects in 1971 include: in March, 32 units of Versailles apartments valued at $425,600 and 32 units of Valleyview apartments at $265,225; April, permits issued to John McCarty for four stores at $182,000.

Also: May, $130,000 addition to Heeney-Sundquist Funeral Home; September, $840,000 medical offices by American Construction; November, permits to Gordon Hall for four stores at $108,000; $75,000 warehouse by Cavanaugh Construction, and $312,000 second floor addition to Oak Hill Nursing Home.

BUILDING permits issued by category were: Residences, 58; residential additions and garages, 46; commercial buildings, four; commercial additions, 10; industrial, one; industrial additions, two; and apartments, 640.

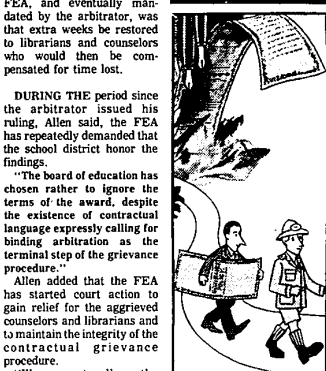

Of the new tax base created by new construction, 70 per cent is provided by apartments, 12 per cent by residential, about nine per cent by commercial and about one per cent by industrial.
