Safety Record
 At midnight, February 8, Winnetka, Ill. achieved the unusual record of four continuous years without a single traffic fatality. Of 393 communities in the country with populations between 10,000 and 25,000, only three other cities have made such a record—Aberdeen, S. D.; Ferguson Falls, Minn.; and Derby, Conn.

Young Americans
 According to the 1940 census, there were more Americans in the 14 to 19 year age group than in any other bracket.

Don't spend your pay in competition with your neighbors for scarce civilian goods. Save, America, and you will save America from black markets and runaway inflation. Buy more Bonds every payday. How many bonds? Figure it out yourself.

Gabes Is Rich Oasis That Stands in Tunisian Desert
 Gabes, Tunisian port bagged by the British in their chase of Rommel, is a way station on the coast from the Algerian to the Libyan coast.
 The town, a community of 20,000 people, is midway on the 43-mile coast road from Bizerte and Tunis to Tripoli. It is the eastern terminus of the Morocco-Algeria-Tunisia rail network. A 700-mile chain of cists northwest of the town makes a natural highway. The cists are shallow lakes from December to April each year. The rest of the year they are hard-surfaced dry salt flats like those of Utah where automobile speed records have been made.

Three oases at Gabes—the only ones in North Africa—directly on the coast—let down water. These waters create an island of greenery in the waste of the desert, an area covered with 200,000 palm trees, vineyards, olive and citrus groves and fertile gardens. Dates were the chief export of Gabes. Menzel and Djara are village suburbs of the port.
 The drainage from the cists flows into the Mediterranean. The cists in the Tunisian coast. Even light-draft harbor boats have difficulty in the shallow channel leading to the town's wharf. Cargoes and passengers must be lightered to and from larger vessels anchored a mile offshore in the gulf.

Italians Keep American Prisoners in Mountains
 Mountain vistas, sunny climate and starchy diet are likely to be the lot of Americans captured in Tunisia fighting and transferred to a new prison camp at Chieti, Italy. British sources report that prisoners are well treated in this camp, 100 miles northeast across the boot from Rome.
 Chieti is surrounded by mountains on all but its east side. Eastward from its 1,100-foot elevation are seven miles of fertile slope to the Adriatic sea. Thirty miles northwest of Chieti, dim on the horizon beyond the Majella ridge, looms a 9,500-foot peak, the snow-capped Gran Sasso, highest of the Apennines.

A three-mile electric rail branch links the city with a main line reaching Rome and other Italian cities. The surrounding region was a popular peacetime vacation spot.
 The city is capital of Chieti province. It was capital of the whole scenic and historic Abruzzo region in the days of Norman rule, and was the seat of the religious order of Theatine Monks. Tourists were fascinated by its venerable churches and church relics. Its public art gallery has a fine collection of majolica ware. Held and developed for centuries by the Greeks, it contains the remains of an ancient Greek theater and large reservoirs.
