"Soul" will be the subject of the Lecture-Sermon in all Christian churches throughout the world on Sunday, August 15. The Golden Text (Psalm 22:1-3) is: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul."

Among the Bible citations in this passage (Deut. 6:4-5): "Hear O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p.465): "Soul or Spirit Deity and nothing else."

Looking Back Through The Enterprise Files

TWENTY FIVE YEARS AGO (August 16, 1918)
An Event of the Season
Last Friday was just the day for a picnic, and about 200 of the members and friends of the M. E. Sunday School were on hand to go to Walley Lake bright and early. Arriving at the lake the picnicers were invited to the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Otis, who very kindly turned the equities and boats over to them.

Letter From "Somewhere"
July 5, 1918
"I hope you had a good time the Fourth. I spent my Fourth a little different than ever before—no ball games, horse races or other sports for yours truly, but I'll say we had more fire works, and it was the real stuff, too."
"We have some very fine companions around us at all times—rats. Anyway that's what they used to be called, but they sure have outgrown the rat race. They are about the size of a cat."

Dry Weather
And still it's dry. However, during our trip last week to Lansing we were made aware of the fact that it was not dry as compared with that section. Everything around Lansing is literally burned up, the pastures affording no feed, and the hay crop almost an entire failure.

TEN YEARS AGO (August 17, 1929)
Shorter Business Hours Agreed On
Cooperation of all Farmington business places in uniform closing hours is regarded as almost certain, following a meeting Thursday of the Advisory Board of the newly-formed Retail Merchants Association. Hours of eight a.m. to six p.m. weekdays, and 9 p.m. Saturdays were agreed upon for a thirty day trial, beginning Monday.

Large Winery Plans To Locate Here
Location in Farmington of a new industry which would employ 30 men for several months of the year and at least 10 the year around, appeared virtually assured Thursday, following a report from an architect on plans for remodeling the old D.U.R. power building at Farmington Junction for a winery which would start making huge quantities of wine here within the next few months.

Pay Teachers On Basis of Income
Farmington school teachers will be paid according to an "ability to pay policy" during the coming year. Teachers will not be cut at any time during the year from their regular salaries. At the end of each month they will be paid in full, if the board has enough money on hand to pay them. If however, the board does not have enough money to meet the payments in full, each teacher will be paid from the money on hand an amount proportionate to his or her salary.

FIVE YEARS AGO (August 11, 1934)
Landscape Plan Receives Support
Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wageningen will include a Farmington landscaping plan in his next project. Prominent citizens here this week. Petitions bearing approximately 500 signatures of residents of the City of Farmington and Farmington Township were presented Tuesday to the Commissioner by Mayor Howard Warner and Howard L. Richards.

62 Per Cent Of City Taxes Collected
No penalty will be placed on residents who pay their city taxes in August. City Commissioners made that motion Monday night, but they remind local citizens that the 1 per cent penalty will be exacted starting September 1.

Three Local Men Go On Airport Tour
Whether or not Oakland County will have a fully equipped, mile square airport remains to be seen. During the preliminary inspection trip held Tuesday afternoon two Farmington City Commissioners and one Farmington Township official were present. Mayor Howard Warner, Commissioner Leo Gidyczewski and Supervisor Arthur Coe were passengers on the American Airline flagship Washington.

a large specimen of native copper that Baron La Hontan, who visited the straits in 1683, wrote: "You can scarcely believe what vast shoals of whetstone are seen about the middle of the channel, between the continent and the Isle of Manitoulin." It was the abundance of whetstone that prompted Father Marquette to establish his mission at Point St Ignace in 1671.

In fact, it was a custom for the Chippewas to carry their surplus whetstone to Mackinac where they sold it at a high price to both the French and Indians. Whetstone is still the choice piece of resistance for northern Michigan men.

It was Schoolcraft who wrote "Algis Reservoir" and searched into customs of the Indians, from which Henry Wadsworth Longfellow wrote the immortal epic "Hiawatha."

The Hand That Rocks The Cradle

Those little wooden cradles one sees in museums and often in the attics of old family homes are mute testimony of a time when mothers really did rock their babies to sleep and it was first said that the "hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

Those mothers' were busy people, all right, what with the household sewing and knitting to do, the cooking and washing and ironing as well as the care of six or eight or ten children! So it was a bit startling to have some one assert that they had anything to do with the affairs of the great world outside their own homes. What chance did any woman, tied down with all kinds of household drudgery have to play a part in world affairs? But through the training she gave her children she had a very definite effect on the world at large.

The life of a modern mother whom industry has largely set free, is very different from that of her cradle-rocking great-grandmothers. Yet she, too, is the most important influence in her children's lives, although she puts them to sleep in scientifically constructed cribs, feeds them according to the latest findings of child specialists.

But in addition to ruling the world through her children, she has a direct influence on the world in which she and her family live. She takes part in community affairs. She votes. Many modern mothers speak and write about world affairs as eloquently as men. Still others hold important positions in business. And today, hundreds of thousands of them are working in war plants helping turn out the vast supplies of materials essential for Victory.

The smart modern mother who gets breakfast for her family, puts her house in order, feeds and dresses her baby and takes it to a nursery for the day and then punches the time clock at some war plant is as busy as her great-grandmother but in a different way and she would undoubtedly astonish her forebears. The slacks she wears, the way her hair is cut, her red finger nails might put her ancestors out a bit. But if a mother of the 19th Century talked with this modern mother she would discover they had many things in common.

Their love for their children, for instance, their loyalty to their country, their willingness to do their share are the same. The hand that tends the modern baby is still helping to rule the world, but more directly and more intelligently than it did a century ago.

CONGRESSIONAL COMMENT

By Rep. George A. Dondero

This week a special Congressional executive committee, representing 32 states, met with Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes in Chicago to discuss the gasoline and oil situation in this area. I attended as the Michigan representative on the committee, which has a membership of 263 U. S. Representatives, with an executive committee made up of one from each of the 32 states.

The purpose of the committee is to safeguard the supply of gasoline and oil for Michigan and other central and western states. Late last week Petroleum Administrator Ickes made the announcement that changes in gasoline rationing are in prospect and Rep. Clarence J. Brown of Ohio issued the call for this week's meeting to determine the facts of the situation and the gasoline rationing. The committee presented information on conditions in each of the 32 states and sought to know why, when the act is getting more gasoline now than ever before this year, we have to be restricted in the central and western states. The Administrator Ickes said the oil situation was such as not to admit of any postponing of action until Congress reconvenes in September. A reduction in the value of a gasoline coupons in this state and elsewhere in the country appears to be in prospect. The reduction may be from 3 to 3 gallons or even less per coupon. At the same time that gasoline use is further curtailed in Michigan, the allowance for eastern states will be increased. (The exact extent of the curbs the Midwest had not been determined when this report was prepared.) Rationing officials assign various reasons for reducing gasoline allowances in this area. One being that "insufficient supplies are reaching the Midwest." Price Administrator Brown advances another indirect basis for restriction in the shortage of automobile parts. Administrator Brown is authority for the statement that defense workers are wearing out and going off the road at the rate of more than 4,000 a day. I believe it would seriously affect the war effort if the action to further restrict the amount of gasoline making it difficult for defense workers and others to reach their places of employment. The problem of gas rationing is largely one of transportation. Reduction of gas for the people of the central and western states would not necessarily mean more gas for the eastern seaboard and the 12 eastern states. Many communities in this area do not have adequate transportation facilities, some none at all, and must depend on the automobile for travel.
