POWER SAVED AT HOME-

more power for the FIGHTING FRONT!

The power behind your electric switch is really a product of coal and manhours and transportation, of copper and steel and tungsten and other critical war materials used in its manufacture. Every bit of electric power you save at home means more power available for the fighting front. Every pound of coal, every gallon of oil, every hour saved in the production of electricity means that much more available to achieve maximum war production. . . . Think of electricity in terms of weapons and supplies for our fighting men . . . and use it as carefully as you would rubber or gasoline or any other vital war material. The Detroit Edison Company.
