Budget Warns Soviets--Griffin

President Nixon's proposed increase in defense spending for 1973 can be viewed as a warning to Russia that the United States intends to stay on top in weaponry says Republican U.S. Sen. Robert Griffin.

Speaking to the Livonia Chamber of Commerce last week, Griffin said that increased defense spending is a means of maintaining peace.

"For our own security and to prevent aggression, it is important that we don't give the guarantee that we are going to stand still," Griffin said. "I agree with President Nixon when he says that a strong defense is essential to maintaining the peace."

THE PROPOSED $82 billion defense budget will include spending for defense-related

Realtors At Convention

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Crosby, 34105 State, and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hussey, 29016 Club House Lane, all of Farmington, were recently at the Las Vegas Hilton while attending mid-winter business meetings of the National Assn. of Real Estate Boards.

Hussey is president and Crosby executive vice president of the United Northwestern Realty Assn. and Western Wayne - Oakland County Board of Realtors, the nation's largest multiple listing organization.

projects, including nuclear warheads and ballistic missiles. In addition to producing a strong front in relation to defenses, the budget is expected to be a prod to the heavy industries and thus stimulate the economy.

"We are moving toward some kind of agreement in the SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks in Vienna) talks," Griffin said but added that certain areas "like submarines" are crucial areas where there hasn't been agreement.

"Strength is a way of achieving and maintaining peace," Griffin said. "Unilateral weakness is only an invitation to war."

He agreed that some areas of the military "need to be weeded out," but stressed that the country still has to maintain strong defenses.

"Those who are misguided into thinking you can achieve peace by the United States disarming itself are not helping the situation any and, if anything, they are just making it worse," he said.
