For your summer reading here is a brief synopsis of three of Kathleen Norris's novels, the best reading entertainment:

You Can't Have Everything --Kathleen Norris. This is the rich and thoughtful story of Camand thoughtful story of Cam-bovely, vicenty-seven, mother of two delightful children, and the wife of the socially active Bob Sylvester. It was Bob who pre-cipitated the trouble; Bob who had been such an ardent lover, such a considerate bridegroom.

Knowing nothing of life, without friends, Juanita struggles against tevry obstacle to earn her living, to find her name and her heritage. She learns the cruelty and childishness of man; the faithlessness of women; the brutality of cities. Through it all, and through her averself life, envienced in cities. Throu her eventful cities. Through it all, and through her eventful life, enveloped in mystery, she keeps her pluck and the beauty of spirit that matches her outward beauty, until the story swings into the sunshine and brings her the gifts she deserves.

MEXICANS GO NORTH

TWIN FALLS, IDAHO—Spl. CFI photo from Richard A. Ramme—Thousands of Mexican workers from all the states of our sister republic will help to gather the Pacific Northwest farm crops. This is the tirst year Mexicans have come to the Northwest before the harvest line to the extreme labor shortage they were recruited earlier, at wages ranging at unheard of sums of between 60 to 80 cents amount for the common field hand. Here a group of nowly arrived workers are gathered after arriving at Twin Palls. Less than 10 per cent are familiar with the English language and few have ever been north of the border.
