Memories Of The Fourth

Not so long ago, to the children of America, the Fourth of July loomed second in importance only to Christmas. This was true in the thousands of little towns and villages located all over this country. For weeks ahead, preparations would be made.

Fourth of July morning always dawned hot and clear, to the crackling of small fireworks. After breakfast father got busy stringing up wire along the sidewalk for the Japanese lanterns to be hung on. The lanterns had been waiting for this all winter, in a big box in the attic, along with the Christmas tree ornaments.

The children were torn between the fascination of lantern hanging and the making of peach ice cream, down cellar in the freezer. And of course, there was a store of fireworks and sparklers and noise makers, which were alternately squandered and hoarded against the evening.

And then, as the long twilight came on, festivities really started. Every street, every yard in the neighborhood became a fairland, decked with candle-lit, gently swaying lanterns. And in front of the school a band struck up. And in the school yard itself, an ice cream stand dispensed cones—chocolate and vanilla—in seemingly inexhaustible quantities to seemingly insatiable children, in exchange for pink tickets, of which one always had one's supply and one's parents' supply and one's baby sister's supply too. Oh, blissful, joyful night!

Those youngsters didn't know or care, then, that Independence Day marked the founding of a philosophy of freedom in America. They were too busy living that freedom.

Today, we find ourselves very busy preserving that freedom, so once again, our children, and our children's children after them, may live their freedom.

This poster "Fire Away" shows a scene aboard the U. S. Submarine "Dorado." The artist, the celebrated American painter George Schreber, has caught the action during the very tense moment before the passing craft is identified as friend or foe. The painting is authentic in every detail for the artist was actually aboard the Submarine at sea. He ate and slept with the crew. He worked with the men and stood watch with the officers. A short time after leaving the Submarine, it was lost with all hands.

"Sacrament" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, July 9.

The Golden Text (Psalms 51:10): "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

Among the Bible citations in this passage (John 4:23): "But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (140): "We worship spiritual; by only as we cease to worship material. Spiritual devotness is the soul of Christianity."

Looking Back Through The Enterprise Files

TWENTY FIVE YEARS AGO (July 11, 1919)

Local Stores Ransacked
 Last Thursday morning when Ben Meyers came down to the barber shop he discovered that some one had entered the place during the night and taken three watches from the C. W. Chamberlin jewelry department, one of which was more than ordinarily valuable, having a diamond setting in the back of the case. Fred Pauline also found traces of a lunch having been partaken of in their store, and missed some stockings, change from the money drawer, and at the C. F. Smith store some oranges were made away with.

Owing to the fact that we were left two weeks ago almost on a moment's notice without help in the Enterprise office, and that it is almost impossible to secure help that is capable, we have decided to install a typesetting machine, and gave an order for the same this week.

New Publication

The "Michigan Milk Messenger" is the name of a new monthly periodical published by the Michigan Milk Producers' association in the interest of the producing and consuming public. R. C. Reed, of Howell, is the editor and business manager and G. L. Adams of Fowlerville, does the printing.

TEN YEARS AGO (July 19, 1934)

Blanchard Again On Township Board
 Farmington Township Board presents an altered membership following change in one place on the governing body on Tuesday evening. Ernest Blanchard, justice of the peace, took his position Tuesday night, succeeding Ward Eagle as one of the justices serving on the board. The other is Walter Headerle.

Expect Testimony To Draw Crowds To Farmington
 A large gospel tent seating 400 has been set up on a lot on Grand River near Michigan Avenue by Farmington Baptist Church. Three weeks of preaching services will be held nightly except Saturdays at 7:45. Outstanding preachers and singers are coming to assist in these tent meetings.

Local People Participate In Play
 "The World's All Right," a community play, will be presented at the high school athletic field next Wednesday and Thursday, July 25 and 26. The play is being sponsored by Our Lady of Sorrows Church for the benefit of their new school which is now under construction on the Grand River Road.

FIVE YEARS AGO (July 6, 1939)

School To Get New Teachers
 Two new teachers will be added to the Farmington school faculty next fall, according to an announcement made by Orville E. Duncker, newly-appointed superintendent of schools. Miss Marian Dammon will assume her duties as teacher of English in the high school. The other new teacher is Marjorie Parson, who will teach kindergarten and elementary music.

Safe And Sane Fourth
 Despite the abnormally high flow of traffic through Farmington during the Fourth of July holidays, there was no reported traffic accidents, deaths or injuries. This careful driving was mirrored all over the state. It was reported that the number of traffic fatalities throughout Michigan fell considerably this Fourth of July.

School Building Work Progresses
 Rapid progress is being made in the construction of the new high school building. Due to the ideal weather since building was begun last spring, workers have lost only one day, and barring unexpected delays, the structure will be ready when school opens in September.

Thousands of returning servicemen will be looking to the state and federal government for guidance in their return to civilian usefulness. As a World War veteran himself, Kelly has a sentimental affection for war veterans. He wants to help them.

Furthermore, the increase in complexity of state government—now a "big business" that disbursts millions of dollars each year—has imposed tremendous burdens on the governor. Kelly's first move to decentralize the load was to create with legislative sanction the office of business manager.

Dr. Robert Ford, University of Michigan executive, was appointed to this post.

Now comes a further recognition of the problem by the governor's proposal that the lieutenant governor, whose compensation is $25,000 a year, should become the governor's right-hand man as an "assistant governor" and accordingly, should serve the public full-time—eight hours a day, and 48 hours or more a week—instead of the present custom of one or more days a week.

Obviously, then, if the lieutenant governor is to become a "partner" of the governor in administration of governmental affairs, the man should merit the requirements of a partner—he should enjoy the confidence of the governor as constituting one-half of the team. Brown's judgment, seasoned by long experience in the state legislature and six years as auditor general, has won the respect of all state officials including the governor. Keyes' judgment has been unpredictable, frequently in direct opposition to Kelly and others. Brown has the support of all Republican officeholders except Charles Ziegler who has announced a policy of neutrality. Keyes retaliates with charges of "bossism" and "purge"; Kelly says he is a leader who is responsible to the voters at the polls and hence is no "boss."

And now for the speculation that the lieutenant governor may (Continued on Page Seven)

Let's discuss the situation briefly.

The basic issue in the minds of Governor Kelly, who is going to head the state ticket in November, is whether Michigan is ready to elevate the office of lieutenant governor to a partnership equality with the office of governor.

To Dr. Keyes, the office is primarily a preparatory training and stepping stone to the governorship. To Brown, it would be a full-time responsibility which will require the holder to devote eight or more hours each day, five or more days each week, to the performance of state duties.

It is Governor Kelly's belief that Michigan is going to face a troublesome time in the post-war period. Reconversion of automobile plants, for example. Hundreds of
