6,000 Physicians Added

To Rolls During 1943

There were 5,932 additions to the medical profession in 1943, according to the data presented in the 42nd annual compilation of medical licensure and allied statistics by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association.

The report says that the number of physicians removed by death in 1943 was 3,382. "It would appear, therefore," the report says, "that the physician population in the United States last year was increased by 2,550. In view of the accelerated curriculum with two classes graduating from most schools in 1943, one might expect that additions to the profession should be considerably higher. This in reality is the case at the present time. However, many physicians who obtained M.D. degrees in December of 1943 were not able to receive licenses until early in the year 1944, owing to administrative details."

"Estimated figures indicate that on February 1, 1944, the number of physicians in continental United States, including those licensed in 1943, was 186,496. Excluding physicians who are in military service, engaged in full time hospital work, retired, not in practice or engaged in full time teaching, there remain about 100,000 physicians in private practice, some of whom are part time teachers."

Shaker Corrosion

To prevent salt shaker top corrosion, remove tops from the salt shakers, invert and pour melted paraffin through them. Enough paraffin will adhere to coat the surface and holes may be opened with a needle. This lasts indefinitely.

* * BONDS OVER AMERICA * *

"Oh, Say, Can You See . . ."

On a spit of land jutting into the Patuxent river, just below Baltimore, stands star shaped Fort Mifflin, whose "Star Spangled Banner" prompted Francis Scott Key to write the words which became our national anthem.

There's another star shaped fort—old Fort Wood, that now serves as a support for the Statue of Liberty on Bedloe's Island in New York Harbor.
