Reversible Pitch
Reversible pitch propellers that can stop our heaviest bombers in one-half the normal landing roll and can slow a single-engine fighter down to 250 miles per hour in a vertical dive are emerging from the experimental stage. A propeller in reverse pitch does not change the direction of its rotation. Instead, the angle of the propeller blades is reversed, thus throwing the air blasts forward.

tritional basis," as he calls it. And like many other medical men, fearful lest the public might jump to erroneous conclusions, he had hesitated to publicize them.
Then came World War II, and the astonishing discovery that approximately one-third of all the young men called up for the draft in the United States were unfit for military service, much of which was the result of faulty nutrition. The medical division of Selective Service pointed out that in one state where people ate fairly well only three men out of ten were rejected for physical deficiencies. In another state where standards of nourishment were very low, the proportion of rejections was seven out of ten.

servings daily including a green or yellow vegetable and potatoes, tomatoes, citrus or other fresh fruit or raw cabbage.
Protein foods — Two servings daily selected from products such as lean meat, fish, eggs, cheese, beans, nuts.
Whole grain — One or more servings daily of whole grain cereal such as oat meal, and also whole grain bread. Use enriched flour in place of plain white flour.
Butter or margarine — Two or more servings daily.
Fish-liver oil — One teaspoon for children each day.
Water — Drink six to eight glasses daily.

"Now what has all this got to do with brewer's yeast," you inquire.
It is the private belief of Dr. DeKleinc, and hence not officially preached by the state department of health, that brewer's yeast possesses qualities that are effective in reduction of high blood pressure and in adding the digestive system. Brewer's yeast, PLUS the above nutrition diet, would greatly improve the health of the average citizen, especially an individual 40 years or more of age, in the opinion of Dr. DeKleinc. The state commissioner hopes manufacturers will reduce the price of this product, which is available in powder form and in tablets, to permit its wide use by the public. And incidentally, the name "brewer's yeast" has nothing to do with a brewery; it has become a stan-

Today there is hardly a doctor in the land who does not have more patients than ever to take care of; who is not overworked; who does not think of himself last, if at all. You can help ease your doctor's burden in many ways. One is by going to his office if it is at all possible, instead of asking him to come to you. Another is by consulting him promptly concerning what may seem to be minor ailments, enabling him to prevent their turning into serious illnesses. Do your part, and your doctor will do his.
A competent, conscientious druggist will provide only the finest ingredients and workmanship combined in the prescriptions your doctor writes. This is the fourth of a series of editorial advertisements, appearing in this paper each week.

high blood pressure, insists he can walk up the capitol stairs at a brisk pace, thanks to downing a teaspoon of brewer's yeast daily for several months.
Here's the story which begins in Washington, D.C.
When Dr. William DeKleinc became national medical director of the American Red Cross at Washington some years ago, he was given a chore of combating a rising curve of pellagra deaths in the South. A serious regional menace, pellagra was due solely to lack of vitamin B in the diet of some whites and Negroes who preferred, by long custom and family tradition, a combination of sowlly pork—locally known as "white meat"—and corn bread.
These products are all right as part of a diversified diet, but a steady fare of them results in a chronic disease characterized by skin lesions, gastro-intestinal disturbance and nervous symptoms. Dr. DeKleinc knew he couldn't persuade by educational methods the Southerners to abandon their diet. So upon the recommendation of Dr. Joseph Goldberger, he chose brewer's yeast as a supplementary food.
Result: The American Red Cross purchased brewer's yeast literally by the ton, and distributed it free to low-income dwellers in the sowlly-corn bread belt. Pellagra decreased promptly as a regional disease, and is now almost at the vanishing point. Perhaps you remember now reading about it in the press and magazines.
In 1944 when Governor Kelly was confronted with the necessity of choosing a new commissioner for the state department of health, he invited Dr. DeKleinc, a native of Grand Haven, to accept the position. Public health work was not new to Dr. DeKleinc. He had served as health officer in Flint and Saginaw and thus knew the health problems of Michigan residents.
For some years the present state health commissioner had private ideas of his own, due to private observation and studies, about the value of living on a "nu-

Undernourishment in a land that had resorted to an economy of scarcity was obviously an indictment not to be easily set aside. Hence the advent of the "basic seven" program of modern nutrition, blessed by the federal government, enthusiastically pushed by extension divisions of educational institutions like Michigan State College, and generally acknowledged by the medical profession. And here it is on a daily minimum.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

MARY: "Jim, didn't you say you wanted to ask the Judge something about grain, the next time you saw him?"

JIM: "That's right, I did, Mary. Is it true, Judge, that distillers recover part of the grain they use in making war-alcohol?"

OLD JUDGE: "That's absolutely true, Jim. Wherever the government has needed distillers to purchase the equipment necessary to reprocess the used grain, at least 50% of the feed value (25% by weight) of the whole grain is recovered. It comes back to farms like yours in the form of premium-quality livestock feed... rich in vitamins B1 and B2."

JIM: "Is the same thing true when distillers are permitted to make whiskey, Judge?"

OLD JUDGE: "Yes, every bit as true, Jim."
