BECAUSE SOMEONE BROKE THE STREET LIGHT!

Bitter experience—reckoned in smashed cars and bleeding, broken bodies—prove that the less street light there is in a community, the more accidents.

And here's the point: Few streets in America have enough light at night. That makes every street lamp specially important.

Anyone who breaks a street light may be condemning a fellow American to sudden death or crippling injury at that darkened spot a few hours later. REPORT EROKEN LIGHTS to any Edison office or to the police.
