

Shade Needed for Hogs
Hogs can't sweat, so fat ones will die in hot weather if they can't get shade and moisture. A cement walk under a roof is good. Some farmers have sprinkler systems for hog houses with cement floors.

Separating Egg Yolk
When separating the whites from the yolks of eggs, if a speck of the yolk falls into the whites, touch the speck with the end of a clean cloth. The yolk will stick to the cloth.

My Country — Russell W. Davenport. This is a poem that comes out of the plains and mountains and rivers. It comes out of the farms and the cities. It gives voice to the huge factories, the wheels and levers, the "sheds and smoking chimneys." The spirit of American machinery is always in the background of "My Country" — and sometimes in the foreground. "My Country" was not written in a garret. The author, Russell Davenport, has participated actively in many aspects of American life, from industry to politics, from the arts to the Army. His poem is rooted in the realities of American life.

These realities he finds in familiar American virtues — courage, energy, inventiveness, love of freedom, love of man. But the poet will not let it stop there. He urges us onward into the evils of our time — apathy, cowardice, selfishness, godlessness. By there, he faces the horror of death on the field of battle.

But still he urges us onward. A great American vision emerges from "My Country." The poet sees a world community, symbolized and carried forward by the American flag. And he has dared to suggest, in towering verse, the secret of the American future — a spiritual awakening — a knowledge of God, the "Brother in our hearts" — a realization at last of the brotherhood of man.

How to Iron Cottons
When ironing cotton materials be careful not to have the iron too hot. Though a scorch may not show, an iron too hot can damage the fibers. If your iron has a heat control, watch it carefully. If not, test the heat of the iron by running over a test cloth, placed near by.

The Sun---friendly But Sometimes Dangerous

By Courtesy of SMITH-BRADLEY DRUG CO.
All life is dependent upon the sun—but excessive exposure to its rays can result in painful and even dangerous burns. A day spent in the summer sun and wind can lead to misery and illness.

Alleviation from over-exposure is possible — immediate protection from serious results is essential. If you burn easily it is well to consult a physician at the first sign of discomfort.

Extreme care is necessary in the treatment of sunburn, and the best and purest ingredients should be used. Your doctor will recommend a reputable drugist.
