Ramie Yields Fiber Of Many Qualities

Hollowed-back mummies replying in the Leeds University museum, England, are better dressed, from the standpoint of quality, than much alive moderns of today. After 4,000 years, the cloth in which they are wrapped is still intact. Made from ramie, the oldest natural fiber known to man, the cloth was called "grass linen" by the ancient Egyptians, and although highly desirable as a fabric, it was not made in quantity because of difficulty in getting the fiber from the stalk. Eight times stronger than cotton and six times stronger than flax, ramie is known on the textile world as a possible rival to "King Cotton." The plant, a legless nettle (Boehmeria nivea), is indigenous to China and found in Java, Australia, the Philippines and Brazil. In the United States most ramie is grown in the Everglades section of Florida. Extremely easy to cultivate in warm climates, ramie can be cut as often as four times a year, grows from three to nine feet long, and the roots continue to sprout and grow without much attention for 10 years. Ramie fiber is one of the longest vegetable fibers known. It is unaffected by mildew, neither shrinks nor stretches, is lustrous and white without bleaching, and washes easily when made into cloth. When used to increase the bulk or weight of plastics and other textiles, it imparts qualities more desirable than those of any fillers now employed. Chemically, ramie and cotton, two of the purest cellulose fibers, are identical; physically, they have decidedly different properties. Twice as resistant to heat as cotton, ramie is unaffected by exposure to grease and oil and accepts dyes more readily than cotton. 15-1-p

Plans Being Laid For Boy Scout Week

Plans raising at many Schools, Camping on City Hall Lawns, visits by Scout groups from Canada, and many other special activities are included in the local council's plan for Boy Scout Week which occurs during the period of February 9-14. Not only is the local Council making elaborate plans to celebrate Scout's 56th Birthday Anniversary but most of the 800 Cub Packs and Scout Troops will plan special projects of their own such as Parent Nites, Father and Son Hikes, Sponsoring Institutions, Banquets, Courts of Honor, Hobby Shows, Exhibitions, and Store Window Exhibits. Many groups will conduct "Know your City" hikes to local points of interest in their own communities. Those Scouts and Scout Leaders who participated in planned programs at the official Abraham Lincoln statue, W. Warren and Livonia on February 12, will receive Lincoln Life Foundation "Pilgrimage" certificates. On "Anniversary Day," February 9, uniformed Scouts will be invited to raise their school flags. February 8 is "Outing Day" and many Troops and Patrols will be conducting day or night overnight hikes on the Scout Reservation or in nearby parks and vacant lots. February 10 is "Scout Sunday." Most Pastors, Priests and Rabbis will be conducting special services for the Cub Scouts and leaders of respective parish or congregation. Two outstanding pre-Anniversary Week projects are already scheduled. One is special "Scout's Own" service for all scouts and leaders of the Episcopal church, at St. Paul's Cathedral Sunday evening January 20. The other project is the Council's Annual Scout's Rally at Music Hall, 350 Madison Avenue, Saturday, Feb. 2. A nationally known Y.M.C.A. Executive and author, James L. Ellenwood, has been secured as guest speaker. The popular Boy Scout band now rehearsing under Wayne University leadership will make its first 1946 appearance. Distinguished awards such as the Silver Beaver and Scoutmaster's Key will be presented. 1900 tickets for the Scouters' Rally were placed on sale at the Council office just this week. 1946 Anniversary Week means more than usual as the local Council sustains Membership Campaign — to supplement the Council's Community Fund Budget — will follow immediately the closing of Anniversary Week's celebrations. 15-1-p
