The Green Thumb
By GEORGE ABRAHAM

Put in a vegetable garden! Did you know that Americans are going to pay $7 billion more to eat this year? Food is going to eat up a lot of your pay check, mainly because of rising supermarket prices. A family with $10,000 income will spend one fourth of it for food - that's food for thought.

One way to offset the high food costs is to grow your own vegetables. Money isn't the only benefit you get from working the garden.

True, you do earn $4.50 an hour in the vegetable patch, but think what it does for your health. In an age of frustration and filters, gardening is a good tranquilizer, with plenty of good side effects such as sleeping well at night.

If you live in an apartment or have a vest-pocket garden, grow tomatoes, herbs and other plants in pots or window boxes.

You can grow tomatoes on a wire corset in the backyard and get up to 60 pounds of fruit from a single vine.

Get your children interested in growing fruits, vegetables or flowers. See how it improves their own minds.

Last year we sponsored a giant sunflower and pumpkin contest with thousands of young people nursing plants along.

COMMEMORATIVES - To honor the first World Rose Convention held in New Zealand last November, the New Zealand government issued three beautiful commemorative rose stamps. The 8 cent is big red Chrysler Imperial, the 5 cent world known pink and sunrise yellow Peace, and the 2 cent pink Tiffany. All three of these roses are All-America award winners.

YELLOW LEAVES on house plants: One reason why leaves turn yellow on house plants is poor drainage, or over watering. Some of our modern containers are plastic or glazed, which means that there's no exchange of air to the roots. Water builds up and the plants suffocate.

Next to light, drainage is the most important factor. Foliage dying from the base upwards, can be due to a lack of light, dry soil, high room temperature or leaking gas.

BUSH TYPE - Imagine bushy sweet peas like this one in your flower boxes, beds or borders - all new uses for a well-loved fragrant flower.

Bush Sweet Peas 8 Inches Tall

For generations sweet peas were tall - growing vines. But in recent years bush forms have been developed.

Tiniest are those named Little Sweetheart, since they grow in compact mounds only eight inches tall. The little blooms have ruffled petals and a mixture of seeds will result in plants with white, pink, rose, carmine and dark blue flowers.

Knee - Hi sweet peas begin to bloom exceptionally early, have big blossoms and plants are heat resistant. They also will support themselves so that no staking is needed though they grow 2 1/2 feet tall. Seeds are available in mixed colors.

Plants of the Bijou strain reach only a foot in height. Even so, flower stems are long enough to cut for indoor use.

All the usual sweet pea colors and others such as maroon, mid - blue and salmon can be bought separately or in mixture.

'How To Grow A Lousy Lawn'

"The good, the bad and the ugly" - or how to grow a lousy lawn without really trying - will be a featured exhibit during Farmers' Week March 20 through 24 at Michigan State University.

MSU turf specialists have had a display to show homeowners why their lawn may not be up to par. And they'll also show visitors how to produce a lush, green lawn with a little tender, loving care.

"Most people with bad lawns either select the wrong turf species, do a poor job of establishing a lawn or fail to maintain it properly," reports James Bogart, MSU turfgrass specialist.

"For example, they'll try to grow a bluegrass lawn on sandy, dry, shaded soil where they should be planting a red fescue.

"Or they won't mow properly. Some fellows scalp their lawn; others leave it so long it's ready for baling - bluegrass hay."

Bogart promises plenty of advice to anyone who stops to see his exhibit in the concourse of Spartan Stadium.

"We'll have many illustrated bulletins available, and experts will be on hand to help you with lawn problems," says Bogart. "Then all you need to do is take home the advice, wait until warm weather and get to work."
